

THE LANDSCAPE OF CRAFT

Craft Week will be celebrated in New Brunswick with the launching of a new book entitled The Landscape of Craft at Gallery 78 in Fredericton on Thursday, November 1, and the opening of an exhibition of works from the book.

Edited by George Fry, published by Goose Land Editions, and featuring an introductory essay by Nancy Bauer and photographs by free-lance photographer Dale McBride, The Landscape of Craft is one of the most adventurous books on New Brunswick Craft ever to be issued. Including the work of more than 48 different craftspeople from "Summer Skies with Waterfall," a hand thrown vessel by Tom Smith which appears on the cover of the book, to "The Flasher" by John Hooper; a series of stained glass window designed by Molly Lamb Bobak and Ned Bowes; and a 14K gold and sterling silver bowl by Brigitte Clavette, the book is a photographic essay on contemporary craft and the influence of the New Brunswick landscape on its design.

According to Nancy Bauer, the author of the book's introductory essay, "New Brunswick is a separate realm, an unambiguous place, clinging to the edge of the continent, walled in by oceans, by forests and by a national border. Within the province there are barriers too: the vast areas of uninhabited wilderness at its heart, the hills that divide each river valley from other valleys, the English, the French, the native Indians and the very poor... The spirit of this place inspires the arts: crafts, painting, writing... For some artists, the inspiration comes literally from the land - from the trees, the ocean, the sky." In this exquisitely designed book, George Fry develops this theme, visually demonstrating the intuitive connection between the craft object and the natural environment, between the land and such abstract design concepts as pattern, shape, colour, form and line.

The gala reception marking the launching of the book will take place at 7 p.m. on Thursday, November 1 at Gallery 78 in Fredericton. Special guests include the craftspeople whose work is featured in the book; Roland Beaulieu, Minister of Tourism, Recreation and Heritage; and Sheila Hugh Mackay, the chair of the foundation which sponsored the publication of the book.

The exhibition of works from the book will run from Tuesday, October 30 to Saturday, November 3.
