

principle in not making the main front to the south but to the north on the Transylvania front. At this moment this assertion is proved by the fact that the convention is being automatically changed. The Roumanians are sending troops from the northern front to Dobrudja and we have to reinforce this front also.

3. The Allies had not taken into proper consideration the military strength of Bulgaria nor its strategic plans. Bulgaria was more or less ignored and the blame for this state of affairs must be placed on the shoulders of the Russian attaché at Bucharest, Colonel Tatarinoff.

The right thing to do was for the Allies to dispatch large Russian forces through the Dobrudja towards Sofia and co-operate with General Sarrail at Saloniki. By this means the Allies would have been able to handle the Grecian situation, dethrone King Constantine and joining forces with the Russians and Greeks have crushed Bulgaria and eliminated her from the war.

If this cannot be done it is possible to support Roumania for a considerable period but eventually disaster is assured and Roumania will be totally defeated.

EDITOR'S NOTE: At the time this report was presented the Roumanians appeared to be victorious in Transylvania and had not yet been defeated beyond the Rothen Thurm pass and driven back into Roumania by von Falkenhayn.
