

And should your lord be in the wrong,
 And you, O wond'rous ! hold your tongue ;
 Ne'er pout, nor frown, nor shew resentment,
 But seem quite pleas'd and all contentment ;
 Tho' men, like us, love contradiction,
 Yet he'll be tyrant if your'e vixen.
 Then ne'er for power supreme contend,
 Submit—you'll govern in the end,

This is the charm, the only art
 By which I hold my Harry's heart ;
 This makes us live just as you see,
 I'm all to him, he's all to me.
 The virgin bird with list'ning ear
 Sat silent, nor did interfere,
 Till thus the bride had fully spoke,
 Then with a sigh thus silence broke ;
 Hard rules indeed, but necessary,
 Therefore I find I must not marry ;
 But e'en perforce—I'm half afraid
 Have my own Will---and die a maid.
