Arrangements are being made to suitably commemorate what is known as "the Irish revival of 1859." Speaking of that movement the Belfast Witness says: "The preaching was conspicuously about Christ and Him Cruidfied-one feature was the personal affection towards the Lord Jesus, Any psalm in which He was foreshadowed, any hymn in which He was mentioned, was sung and quoted over and over again. "There was no organization to work up a revival, no favored evangelist accompanied by a singer, to attract a crowd." Of the effects produced Dr. McIlveen says: "Men, women and even children became possessed of a power to speak about. Christ that was perfectly marvellous. YET ANOTHER JUBILEE

On February 13th, 1859, the first Methodist sermon was preached in British Columbi a by the late Rev. Ephrain Evans, D. D. The service was held in the court house, Victoria. On the mainland the first services were held at the Hudson's Bay fort at Langley on the 26th of the next month by Dr. Evans. Today there are 80 ministers, as many local preachers, nearly as many class leaders, 8,000 church members, about 100 Sunday schools. Last year there was contributed for all purposes $19,,712. And besides all this, a college at New Westminster.

JOHN MILTON.

The Congregationalist speaks thus of the great poet:—For effective speaking it is not enough that one have something important to say and say it distinctly; it must also sound welk He who expresses his thought in fashion so harsh and ragged that it grates upon the ear is reckoned a tedious speaker. Men are neither interested nor persuaded. But the man who can clothe the selfsame message with the subtle charm of melodious speech will command attention. Of all poets Milton is the consummate master of sound. He came by such gifts honestly enough. His father was a distinguish ed composer of tunes. The home of his childhood was full of music and he himself an accomplished organist. Even in early days, before his blindness, the world seems to have appealed to him through sound more than by sight. It was characteristic of him that when in young manhood he visited Italy that lovely land moved him not so much by its art, nor by its antiquities, although he had made of these latter a life-study, as by its music. The sweet-voiced women rather than the paintings and the marbles inspired his muse to sonnet and epigram. There is great variety in the music of Milton's verse. He is by turns tyric and melodious, stirring and martial, somber and melancholy, solemn, stately This is only one advantage among the many which accrue from the study of our poet. His exquisite choice of words enriches the vocabulary, his

The story is told that General Jackson's colored body servant was asked after the General's death, if he thought his master had gone to heaven. Of course it was an impertment question plain all these strange observations, but the faithful old servant was equal to the occasion. "I don't know, massa," was the answer, "but I reckon that if he wanted to go he went." That tells what the man, who knew the great man's strength of will, better, perhaps, than any other, thought of the power of that determined will. It was good theology for the colored man when he said that if the General wanted to go to heaven, "he went."

TO THE INDIVIDUAL

Rev. George Titus Speaker at

Every Day Club Sunday

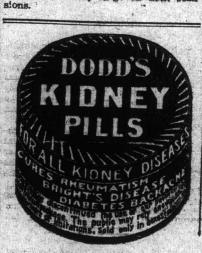

Night

Every man owes it to himself, to his country, to coming generations, and to a suspected suitor. God, to live the best life it is possible for him to live. This statement was the basis of an earnest and eloquent ford Carlson, of Ironton, Wyo., a revival of an Every Day Club last evening by Rev. George Titus, the new paster of. Coburg street Christian church. Mr. Titus did not touch upon methods of dealing with intemperance further than to say that if every man would live up to the highest that is in him there would be an individual prohibition which would also be universal. His whole discourse was directed to the task of impressing upon his hearers the dignity of manhood, its infinite possibilities, and the duty of every man to reverence his manhood and make it count for something in the world's work. He contrasted the lives of those who conquer nature and make it serve man's needs with those of men who spend their years in dissipation. He plotured the sad scenes to be witnessed on our streets and in so many homes, and challenged men to exert their manhood and labor for better conditions. Referring to the vast possibilities of Canada, arel declaring that this is Canada's century, he dwelt upon the duty that devolves upon the manhood and the citizenship of Canada to achieve her highest destiny. The influence of heredity points to our duty to those who will come after us not to hand down to them vicious appetites and tendencies. In conclusion he dwelt upon man's duty to the Giver of life, who expects him to devote it to noble and useful purposes. Not only should men live up to the highest pos-sible standard, of conduct, but they should reach out a helping hand to the man who is down and lift him up also to a higher plane, Mr. Titus declared his warm sympathy with the Every Day Club, in its work to help men. Services in Queen Square Churches Sunday Most Interesting

The services in Queen Square Methodist church conducted by J. Ritchie Bell were attended by large congrega-tions both morning and evening yesterday, the evening congregation filling to overflowing the audience room. The singing at these services is an especially attractive feature. The choir has been enlarged and an orchestra has been added.

Mr. Bell sang at the morning service a solo entitled "The Clean Heart," and in the evening, just previous to his address, he sang "What Will You Do With Jesus?"
