LONDON, Oct 6-News reached here last night that Lieut .-General Helmuth Von Moltke has General Helmuth Von Moltke has been superseded by General Volghtsrhetz, as chief of the German General Staff.

General Von Moltke is a nephew of the great strateget of that name who engineered the Franco Prussian war of 1870, and died in 1891. At the funeral in that year, the Kaiser told Maj. Von Moltke as he then was, that he would be promoted to the rank of personal aide de camp. He was promoted to be major-general in 1899, and appointed commander of the first infantry brigade of the Guards at Potsdam, and he became lieut. general in 1902.

general in 1902.
On January 1, 1906, General
Von Moltke assumed the office of chief of the German General

Staff.

He succeeded Count Schlieffen.

Was Not Qualified.

It was common knowledge at that time that Von Moltke did not consider himself qualified for so high an honor, and strove hard to avoid it, even declining the office on two ocasions, but the imperial will was not to be thwarted.
General Von Moltke has the reputation of being a serious, hard working soldier, as taciturn and silent as his more illustrious name silent as his more illustrious name sake, and a man who has done perhaps more to bring the Germany army to the fighting pitch than any other of his colleagues.

Of General Voighterbetz, who successed General Von Moltke, very little can be gathered even from German reference books. His name is not even mentioned in 'Wer Ists." His father, however, was a great soldier, who was born in 1809 and rose to high rank in the ministry of war. He com-manded a division in 1870-71 and afterward was appointed Gover-nor-General of Hanover. He died in 1877 and had an infantry regiment named after him.

Thus the new chief of staff may be described as a dark horse, and it remains to be seen whether he has inherited his father's ability, and whether he is a better man than the one he has suc-

The tennis courts position gave a clear and exactly measured range to the forts of Namur, and which were smashed up in two days.

"At Maubeuge similar plans were made. Some forest land five miles away, was sold two years ago for building purposes to a firm now believed to be agents of with rails. The Germans used this in the same way. It is suspected that similar concrete bases were prepared before the war by German agents around Antwerp, but the Germans do not appear to have found them accessible yet, or the Belgians forestalled them and rendered the beds useless. A work shop near Schoefard, was last week labelled by the Germans "not to be burned." It was built with German materials and German labor. "There must be something very gravely wrong indeed if the Germans find it necessary to get rid of the man who originated and directed the whole of the strategy of their campaigns, and that at a vitally critical moment,

"At the same time, one can understand that dissatisfaction is felt in high quarters with Von Moltke's work, which has often been of a kind calculated to make his uncle of famous memory turn in his grave, but then we do not know how many of the mistakes were due to Von Moltke's bad judgment and how many to interference with his work by the Emperor or his camarilla.

"One cannot, for instance, believe that Von Moltke of his own initiative and free will withdrew troops from France at a moment.

troops from France at a mom troops from France at a moment when they were urgently needed, to secure a decisive result in that area of war. Having withdrawn them, one cannot either imagine Von Moltke sending them on a useless errand to East Prussia when their presence in Galicia might have saved the Austrian army from disaster.

might have saved the Austrian army from disaster.

"But if he was responsible for such a fatuous policy, then supercession is not sufficient punishment. He should be sent to take a landstrum division into action."

LONDON, Oct. 6.—3.12 a.m.—An Amsterdam dispatch to the Daily Call says that "the dismissal of Gen. Von Moltke was due to a collision with the Emperor over several important questions of strategy."

of strategy.'
Continuing, the dispatch says that the Emperor wished to subordinate sound strategy to a desire to attack England, but Gen. Ven Moltke preferred to postpone the latter action, as it would have no effect upon the immediate estuation. situation.

The Emperor, adds the dispatch wished to detach a large number of airships and aeroplanes to attack. England, but Gen. Von Moltke declared that all available

East Prussia. "The importance of the victory is very great, both from a military and a political point of view. In the latter connection it, will In the latter connection it will serve to arouse serious apprehension in the minds of the German people by sending a fresh flood of fugitives from Eastern Germany flying through the land. On the military side it will go a long way to assure security of the right flank of the main Russian advance, which is now about to begin along a line which has Warsaw for its centre. This advance, which probably will have Berlin for its objective, will be the most striking and spectacular feature of the war.
