MARRIAGE QUESTION

VIEWSON A SUBJECT WHICH, THOUGH OLD, IS EVER NEW-

Marriage is the Corner-Stone Which is Marriage.

The getting married continues. And one is forced to wonder whether the desirability of mating these two people who look so radiantly happy has been thought very much about. I am a believer in marriage. It regard marriage as the corner stone of the State—but just now it is the corner that is chipped and marred in a most awful way. Marriage, as it presents itself to the looker-on, represents a girl in white satin and orange blossoms, a troop of bridesmaids, a procession of understandig and alsower of rice. And then, too often, comes a rapturous six months of love making, a year of misunderstandig and disappointent, and then a stolid and somber settling down and accepting the inevitable. Sometimes making the best of it, sometimes not. Marriage as it should be, ought to have a preface in which two people try to find out whether they have tastes in common, whether they are sympathetic whether if one lost his temper the other could control hers, and whether they will grow weary, horrilly, mournfully, desperately weary of seeing each other three hundred and sixty-five times a year across the dinner table.

What have they a right to expect in marriage? Giving the precedence to the lady I think she has a right to expect in marriage? Giving the precedence to the lady I think she has a right to expect in pool and the absolute of the consideration that a brother could offer, and the consideration that a brother co ceed other three hundred and skxty-five times a year across the dinner table. What have they a right to expect in marriage? Giving the precedence to the lady I think she has a right to expect all the devotion that a lover could give; all the consideration that a brother could offer, and then a certain amount of paternal care. A man has the right to claim in marriage all the joys of friendship and much more. Many times he gets an impulsive affection and very little sympathy. Uncloubtedly, men do shatter the company of the state of the same and the same and the same and the same area denoted by men do shatter the company of the same area denotes but woman can commit sins marriage all the joys of triendship and much more. Meny times he gots an impulsive affection and very little sympathy. Undoubtedly, men do shatter the commandments, but woman can commit sins that are worse. She can be aggravating and wear-some beyond expression, and nine times out of the heart of the sort of the part of the sort of the part of the radiant into times out of the heart of the sort of the part of the sort of the part of the sort of the part of the Riviera at Cape St. Martin, where she spends the summer months. Her English home shat any woman has the right to shirk the pains, or joys, of motherhood, but, too often, because of the love for the babies, the husband is regarded merely as a necessary evil. Women are creatures of habit and once they are on the sea of thoughtlessness, that dangerous sea, they find, before they know it, that their little bark marked "Husband" has drifted away and cannot be drawn back.

A very clever somebody once said that when passion and habit lie long in company, it is only slowly, but it is surely, that habit a akens to find its companion gone. Now, there is the woman, the general woman who says, in a half wearied, half scornful tone "Oh, when I was a young girl I expected everything in married life!" Very little, my friend, comes from expectation. There is an immense amount of truth in that old French proverb. "All things come to him who knoweth how to wait." People remember the first, but forget the last of it, which is the important part. It is the knowing how. It doesn't mean sitting with your hands folded and your lips parted, waiting in direction of all earthly things for her life in the tumble. The right place, watching the cherry until it is ready to fall and then extending it so that it is not bruised in the tumble. The trouble in marriage is, the average woman sees too much of her husband, and then she doesn't have a sufficient number of outside interests to amuse him with. She is inclined to give him a little too ly in black. She requires the aid of two stout canes when she walks. The Frunci people have little to fear from her now, yet she is watched ceaselessly by the police from the time that she first jutis one foot upon French soil until the steamer that is taking her back to England is well on its way.

Eugenie's English home is where she spends most of her time, for there are her freasures, the emblems which connect the sorrowing present with the radiant girls of the past. She has a beautifuivilla on the French part of the Riviera at Cape St. Martin, where she spends the summer months. Her English home at Farnborough is about an hour's rine from London, and is close to Aldershot and Sandburst. It is in one of the pretitest districts of England. From the small rallway station can be seen the spires of St. Michael's chapel, which is really a great mausoleum, for there lie the bones of the last Emperor Napoleum and of the Prince Imperial the only son of Eugenie, killed by the Zulus in the This was the sorrow which robbed the

"Half an hour, surely," remarked the friend and guest, adding in a slightly acidulated tone, "Christmas dinner, too."

"Poor man!" was all Mrs. Grady vouchsafed, with a compassionate smile.

Neither of the speakers was young; as a matter of fact both were between the forties and fifties. Mrs. Chasely looked as if she were on the half-century side. Mrs. Grady appeared as if she could have halled the barrier from a distance of nearly ten years. Actually Mrs. Chasely gave one the impression that if she had tried to feast on content and happiness since her marriage she had not succeeded in completely digesting either. Sunday last a bad man, giving his name as Pete Whaley, arrived at Lone Pine on an old mule, and two hours lates, while playing a game of poker with a citizen named Riberts, got mad and fired a show which killed the latter dead in his tracks. He was promptly taken charge of by the vigilance committee and led out to be hung, but he so stoutly insisted that he was our agricultural editor that his case was postponed and we were telephoned to come over. So far as we could make out we had never set eyes on the man before, but for half an hour he had the impudence to stand up and boldly declare himself a member of the staff. When we finally con vinced him on this point he offered to pay for ten subscriptions of The Kleker if we would intercede for him, and when we replied that the law must take its course he fell to and indulged in the worst vituperation and abuse we ever heard from the ligs of a man in this territory. It was with no little satisfaction that we pulled on the rope which loft him dangling between the neavens and the carth.

Our agricultural editor has taken this matter to heart, and for his jeenoft we wish to say that he is in no sense a tough man. He does not even know the worth of four aces in a hand of poker. He is a thin, stoop-shouldered man, with a hacking cough and a hang-dog look, and no one would ever get his identity mixed up with that of a travelling terror. We pay him

I was averse to doing this, and he advised me to try a change of climate, telling me that my bladder was affected. I acted on his sugges-tion as to change and came to Mon-treal. I did not do anything for about a year, as I wished to get cured. All this time my urine was tainted with blood, although I was suffering no pain, but this abnormal condition was a source of continu anxiety. I finally went to the General Hospital, where the physician in

Mr. Charles Frank, inspector of the mechanical department of the Bell Telephone Co., at 371 Aqueduct street, and who resides at 54 Argygle Avenne, in an interview with a Herald Reporter, related the following wonderful cure by the use of Pink Pills. Mr. Frank, who is 25 years of age, is a Russian by birth, exceedingly intelligent, speaks several languages fluently, and is now apparently in good health. "My illness came about in a peculiar way," said Mr. Frank. "Up to three years ago I was in the best of health. About that time while in Glasgow, Scotland, where I was employed as a clerk in a hotel, and while sculling on the Clyde, a storm came up, and I had a pretty rough time of it for a while. I evidently must have injured myself internally, although I felt nothing wrong at the time. On my way home, however I fell helpless on the street, and, had to be conveyed home in a cab, as my legs were utterly unable to hold me up. I was confined to bed for several days in the same helpless condition, where I willied but found that my there I was the found that my there I was confined to bed for several days in the same helpless condition, where I willied but found that my the same helpless condition, where I willied but found that my the same helpless condition, where I willied but found that my the same helpless condition, up. Achievement.
One of the most attractive signboards to be found in this part of the country, says the New York Sun, is the one designed by Eric Larsen, of Perth Amboy, which swings and creaks in front of his little house in that place. Not only has this sign the charm of mysticism as expressed in certain cabalistic symbols on the reverse of it, but it offers to the public the attraction of a puzzle not too difficult of solution. Moreover, it is Mr. Larsen's own invention.

Lest anyone should fail to grasp the meaning of the sign from the exact reproduction here given, it may be stated that the front of the sign indicates that saw filing is practised within; also tincharge advised me to stay, which I did. the same physicians, but derived no benefit from anything or anyone. I was in despair, as the physicians who had operated on me could not decide as to my trouble. I visited the hospital once more, and they said they would operate again; but I did not care to undergo a second and perhaps equally unsuccessful operation. Some physicians thought my trouble was consumption of the bladder, others that it was Bright's disease, but could not cure that strange bloody condition of my urine.

"Finally I went to work for the Bell Telephone Co., some two years ago, where I worked myself up to my present position. But I was in a state of constant anxiety, as I felt myself getting weaker all the time, and was listless and sleepy and weak in

The miserable sheet across the way which courtesy compets us to refer to as our esteemed contemporary, came out with a sensational article last week in which it was claimed that we ran away from Col. Davidson atter he had fired three shots at us. A meaner or more contemptible canard was never published. Four weeks ago Col. Davidson, who is an erratic man, stopped his Kicker and sent us word that we were a liar. The same thing has occurred several times before, and did not disturb us in the least. The other day, fact in the least in the least. The other day, fact in the least in the least in the least. The other day, fact in the least of the drop on him as he turned from the bar. The low-down old critter who runs the distrag sheet referred to hadn't a grain of truth in his whole story, and but for the fact that his wife is cross-cyed, bald-headed and going bilm with a catacate we'd walk into his office and break him in two over his cheese-press. was listless and sleepy and weak FOR SALE BY

"I am willing." said Mr. Frank, in conclusion, "to see anyone who wishes to verify this interview, as I consider it my duty to my fellow-men and a matter of gratitude to the marvellous cure their medicine has effected.
