

TO TELL CHARACTER BY THE HUMAN HAND.

A new method of determining the character of the subject from his hands has been discovered by a criminal court judge. The fact that the measurement of the middle finger gives the best means of identification has long been recognized and is now made a part of the criminal's record. The judge who has discovered this method is the Hon. J. J. O'Connell, who has been a judge of the Criminal Court for many years. Four Good Short Stories.

Strangers frequently had difficulty in proving their identity at French officials at postoffices and other places. Applicants for letters, etc., often go empty away for want of some means of proving that they are what they pretend to be. The difficulty was, however, surmounted the other day by a gentleman in the circus business who called at the Thionville Postoffice for letters addressed to M. X. acrobat. The postoffice clerk, was not satisfied with the applicant's proofs of identity and refused to hand over the letters, saying:

"How do I know that you are the man?" After a moment's reflection the applicant said:

"All right, I will give you proofs," and, slipping off his coat, he proceeded to make the dull little postoffice clerk, who was sitting at his desk, office lively with somersaults, contortions and circus "business" generally.

The postoffice man, scared out of his life and fearing the wreckage of the premises, handed over the letters and said he was satisfied. —Paris Messenger.

"John," said Mrs. Brown to her husband, as he was about to start for town, "I want you to stop into Ribbons & Remnants on your way home. Be sure to get exactly the same shade, for those shop-girls are so lazy and indifferent that they will give you the first thing that comes to hand if you don't watch them closely, and then they are never willing to rectify their mistakes. Besides, I must have the ribbon this evening, for I want to use it the first thing to-morrow. Now, don't send that stupid office boy of yours to get it. He would be sure to blunder. You need not tell me you haven't time, either. It won't take you a minute to run in there, and you won't have to hunt all over the place looking for the ribbon counter, for I'll tell you exactly where it is."

"Oh, I know where it is," interrupted John. "That's where that pretty little brunette is. I can find the place all right. Six yards, did you say?"

"John," said Mrs. Brown, in freezing accents, "you need not trouble yourself. I don't believe you'll be able to match the ribbon. I'll go myself."

"What changeable people you women are!" John says, going out, winking to himself.

If Mr. Thompson-Seton chose, he could write a book on his lecturing adventures that might prove as interesting, though in a very different way as his, "Lives of the Hunted." Not long ago he was stopped at the theatre door by half a dozen ragged boys, one of whom said: "Say, mister, you de jay dat talk about de animals?"

"Well, say, won't yer give us a pass?"

"How many of there are you?"

"On'y eleven" (others now appearing).

Mr. Thompson-Seton called his manager and said:

"Pass these eleven boys."

"There's eighteen now," said the spokesman.

"All right—pass eighteen," said Mr. Thompson-Seton.

After his lecture of an hour and a half was over he stepped out of the stage door, and here were the eighteen awaiting him as before. Their spokesman once more came forward, and these were his sentiments:

"Say, mister, that is a great! You're no jay. You're a bird—a regular bird!" —New York Commercial Advertiser.

The New York man gets a lot of satisfaction out of a practical joke, even when it costs him the price of a good square meal. Here is the latest example:

"Mister, could you give me something to eat for two days?"

A fat, red-faced person in a seedy suit had approached a well-dressed man on Broadway at 8 o'clock last night. The well-dressed man paused and looked at the beggar. He had been accosted by the same man for three nights in succession.

"Why, yes, if you are hungry I will help you to a supper."

"Well, come in here, then," and the man in evening clothes led the way into the cafe of the Morton House, at Broadway and Fourteenth street.

They sat down with money ordered an extra large sirloin steak, with French fried potatoes and coffee. When the seedy individual finished with a sigh, he tendered his thanks and led the way to a street. In a minute the well-dressed man returned and joined a party of three. There was a whispered consultation, and one of them rose and went out down Broadway. At the corner below was the beggar.

"Haven't eaten anything for 24 hours. I am—"

"Yes, yes, I'll give you a supper. Come into the Morton House."

N. TEMISCAMINGUE SENDS A STORY

A Sturdy Farmer Stricken with Rheumatism is Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

This man was so bad that he was almost paralyzed. A wonderful case and a very happy cure by this excellent remedy.

North Temiscamingue, Que., Jan. 6. (Special).—At the Douglas Farm near here lives Mr. W. H. Johnston who to-day considers himself a very happy man indeed.

The cause of Mr. Johnston's happiness is his somewhat sudden and very remarkable recovery from the most severe case of Rheumatism ever seen in this county.

For a long time he suffered with the Rheumatism which gradually grew worse until it threatened his life. His principal trouble was in his left side, and it was so bad that his neck stiffened so that he could scarcely move it, and was beginning to fear that he would never be able to get up for a time but return with greater force, and a strange feature of his case was that after the pain would leave any part, it left behind it that prickly "pins and needles" sensation.

He thought that perhaps his smoking tobacco had something to do with it, and he gave this up, but received no benefit at all till he used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

This remedy is found to be a complete and absolute cure for his malady, and very soon after commencing its use, the pain began to leave him, and now he is strong and well.

That such an extreme case should yield so easily and quickly proves that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure any case of Rheumatism.

Last of Nares' Discovery.
It looks as though His Majesty's ship "Discovery" was about to disappear from the Navy list, for the vessel, which is now used as a store ship at Portsmouth, is to be paid off, and her crew turned over to the new store ship industry.

The "Discovery" was built so long ago as 1873, at Dundee, and was intended for a whaler, those being the palmy days of the whaling industry.

When the British Government took part, along with the Alert, in Sir George Nares' famous expedition to the Arctic regions in 1875, the "Discovery" was the winter quarters.

"I could get in good meal for half a dollar," said the beggar, insinuatingly.

"Oh, that's all right. Come along, and we'll eat together."

The beggar followed reluctantly. A minute later he was seated at the table he had left a few moments before.

Give this man an extra sirloin, French fried potatoes, a cup of coffee and pie," said the host to the surprised waiter.

The beggar was turning red and white, but held his nerve. When the steak was brought in he smiled at it, and did swallow two mouthfuls. Then he suddenly bolted for the door. —Milwaukee Wisconsin.

HOW TO AVOID SOFT PORK

RESULTS OF TESTS.

The Experimental Farm authorities have issued a report by Prof. Frank T. Shutt, chemist at the Farm, upon the character and causes of soft pork. Softness in pork is a serious defect, and so the question is of great importance to the Canadian bacon industry. Prof. Shutt summarizes the results of his experiments as follows:

1. That of all the grain rations employed, the consisting of equal parts of oats, peas and barley gave the firmest pork. It may further be added that the fat was deposited evenly and not too thickly, and that this ration gave a very thrifty growth.

2. That no difference could be observed in the firmness of the pork from the preceding ration whether fed soaked or dry.

3. That when half the grain ration consisted of corn meal, the resulting pork shows an increased percentage of olein; in other words, a tendency to softness.

4. That in this ration (half corn meal, half oats, peas and barley, in equal parts) the feeding of it boiled gave a slightly higher olein content, but this is only apparent when the average from the four pens is taken in consideration.

5. That considering the effect of feeding the ration of oats, peas and barley during the first period (to a live weight of 100 pounds) and commencing during the finishing period, compared with the reverse of this plan—that is, corn first, followed with oats, peas and barley—we may conclude that the former gives a firmer pork.

6. That in both methods mentioned in the preceding paragraph, no marked difference was to be observed from the ration fed dry or previously soaked, though taking an average of the two groups on each ration the "dry" feed gave a somewhat higher olein content.

7. As when cornmeal formed half the first period ration, and the whole of the second period ration, the resulting pork was somewhat softer than from that of any of the rations already discussed. We conclude that the longer the period during which the corn is fed as a large proportion of the ration, the softer will be the pork.

8. That beans produce a soft and inferior pork. The growth of the pigs so fed was poor and miserable, and the deposition of the fat meagre.

9. That cornmeal fed exclusively as the grain ration, either dry or previously soaked, results in an extremely soft fat, the percentage of olein being considerably higher than from any other ration tested. The pork was of an inferior quality.

10. That the softness of the pork also we noted the miserable growth of the animals, the ration in no sense being an economical one.

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat, and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: over-work and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.
