PANDORA GRATES

has more labor-saving features than any other range. Its laborsaving features are practical, real, musclesaving devices.

The grates are triple, that is, there are three instead of two as is usual in common ranges. The grates are geared into each other at the shaker. Because there are three instead of two wheels gearing into each other, the leverage is twice as great and the effort of turning them is just onehalf, so that is why the labor of shaking down a Pandora Range is just one-half of that in common ranges.

Then, when a grate burns out you can remove it in half a minute with a ten cent piece for a screw-driver.

In common ranges it takes an expert mechanic and a big plumber's bill to renew the grates, because the common range must be practically taken apart to get the old grate out. That is one big reason why the Pandora is the best range ever used in a kitchen, and it has dozens of other good parts. It actually does

"make kitchen work easy."

STONEHENGE.

Rights and Wrongs of Sir Edmund Antrobus In His Wire-Fence Fight With the British Public.

Stonehenge is to England what the pyramids are to Egypt, being indissolubly bound up with the history of the nation. Its age, however, antedating the dawn thereof, since its erigin has been ascribed by the most eminent scientists of the day to an epoch nearly 2,00e years before the birth of Christ. Under the circumstances the public has taken exception to the action of Sir Edmund Antrobus, the owner of the ground upon which it is situated, in surrounding the hoary ruins with a wire fence, and in charging an admission fee. People feel about it, indeed, in much the same way as they might feel if the Khedive of Egypt were to surround the appreaches to the Stonehenge is to England what the might feel if the Khedive of Egypt were to surround the appreaches to the great pyramids near Cairo and of the Sphinx with a fence and to debar the public from access thereto save on the payment of a fee.

The matter has now been brought to the fore by the lawsuits which have been brought against the Matter.

to the fore by the lawsuits which have been brought against Sir Edmund Antrobus by societies organized for the avowed purpose of protecting the rights of the public, says the Marquise de Fontenoy. And, finding that there was no means of either inducing the Government to purchase Etonehenge from Sir Edmund in the same way that it might buy a park for the use of the people, and that, moreover, the title of Sir Edmund to the land on which Stonehenge is located is unassailable, they have brought suit against him in the Court of Chancery in London on the plea that the public has a right of way to the monument.

The Attorney-General and a big array of legal talent are conducting the ease against Sir Edmund and the sease are seaters.

The Attorney-General and a big array of legal talent are conducting the ease against Sir Edmund, and it looks much as if he would be defeated, although he has made clear his position—namely: that if he has surrounded Stonehenge with a barbed wire fence it is for the purpose of protecting the stenes henge with a barbed wire fence it is for the purpose of protecting the stones from the injurious treatment to which they formerly were subjected by peo-ple without any reverence for the hoary past. Moreover, as some of the stones are in danger of falling, he fears that in the event of anybody being injured thereby he might be held financially responsible.

That the ruins have undergone the mest shameful treatment it is impossible to deny. Some of the giant stones were brought down to the ground through holes dug by gypsies. And, while so many of the tourists contented themselves with merely chipping the stones in their anxiety to secure relies, there were others who actually attempted to blow them from their position by means of gunpowder and dynamite, with a view of ascertaining whether there were not any treasures concealed beneath.

whether there were not any treasures concealed beneath.

All these arguments of Sir Edmund are held to be of no avail by the Attorney-General, whoc laims that, in-asmuch as Stonehenge has lain open to all the world since English history began, the public has acculred a right asmuch as Stonenenge has lain open to all the world since English history began, the public has acquired a right of way to every portion of the grounds, and, he adds, that anything in the shape of a medern enclosure tends to destroy the spell formerly created by the aspect of those immense stenes, standing alone, in strange circles, far from human habitations, in the midst of a wast open, rolling plain—those stones which were regarded as prehistoric already a thousand years ago, when Henry of Huntingdon wrote of them. Caxton, the inventor of printing, referred to the mystery of their origin. Sir Philip Sidney sang of them in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. King Charles II., beguiled a day after the disastrous battle of Worcester, in endeavoring to count the stones while hiding at Hele House, and Daniel Defoe, of Robinson Crusoe fame, likewise described his House, and Daniel Defoe, of Robinson Crusoe fame, likewise described his pilgrimage to the spot.

The price for which Sin Edmund offered to sell the ruins and the twenty acres of land on which they stand to the Government or to any public or private body was $750,000, and there has always been a dread lest Andrew Carnegie. J. Pierpont Morgan, or some other American multi-millionaire should take advantage of this offer, purchase the whole property and ruins, and ship the latter off to America, at the same time subjecting their present site to an exhaustive exploration by means of an exhaustive exploration, by means of an exhaustive exploration, by means of excavations, which would probably re-veal wonderful interesting relics of the creators of the temple, and, possibly,

The Peace King.

Proposing the toast of "The King" at a dinner of the German Benevolent So-clety of London, Count Bernstorff, first secretary to the German embassy in London, made graceful and fitting re-ferences to His Majesty's qualities as a statesman.

*The wise ruler of this powerful Em-"The wise ruler of this powerful Empire." said the count, "has won with his own people, as with all the nations of the world, the name of a prince of peace. King Edward is incessently endeavoring to bring nations more closely together and to clear away misunderstandings between them.

"None are better able to appreciate this conciliatory activity on the part of His Majesty than the Germans who make their residence in this country, and who live here a happy and contented life."

In submitting the toast of "The Queen and the Members of the Royal Family." Count Bernstorff said: "We think of Her Majesty to-night as the august helper of the poor, the sick and the suffering."

The Circular Refrigerator, The model refrigerator is quite circular in shape, and that's the beauty of it-not a corner anywhere to harbor dirt or grease; the easiest thing in the world to keep in that spotlessly clean condition which should characterize the place where food is kept.
