WHAT'S HAPPENING TO JONES.

Won't Give Up Office and Is Accused of Partiality; Brockville, Nov. 22 .- An investigation into charges preferred against Division Court Clerk Jones was held here yes-terday by Inspector Dickey. Bailin McPhall, the complainant, alleged that he did not receive a fair share of the executions in the face of Jones being ordered to divide the patronage equally between him and the two other bailiffs. McPhall and Jones were each repre-sented by counsel. Mayor Stewart and Police Magistrate Deacon testified to McPhall being capable to perform the work entrusted to him. Jones is the clerk who refused to re sign his office, taking the stand that under an old statute be cannot be dis-missed without cause. His successor has been appointed and gazetted and is awaiting the delivery of the books which Jones refuses to give up.

NEEDS A MACDONALD.

Sir John A.'s Policy Is Possibly For the Britain of To-day.

London, Nov. 22.-Dr. Rankine Daw son, prospective Conservative candidate, East Division. Edinburgh, in the course of an address to his constituents, said he remembered Canada in free trade days, when he saw the very sim ilar state of affairs as existed in this country at the present time. He saw the remedy applied by Sir John Macdonald, whose policy of modified pro-tection swept the country.

That policy, which Macdonald's poli-tical opponents, though holding long leases of power, had not attempted to alter, was responsible for the flourishing position of Canada at the present day. There was no reason to suppose that a similar remedy would not apply

SHIPPING A SEA.

The Scooping Up Is the Heart of the Giant Wave Myth.

When a steamer as large as the Campania is boarded in weather not for her to be called severe by a wave that sweeps from reasonably assumed security some passengers to death and others to injury, the episode necessitates a new examination of the que tion whether in any given "sea" there is sometimes one billow many times greater than any of its millions of fellows. Belief in the existence of such waves is almost universal on land and not uncommon afloat, for many ships have been swept as was the Campania and not a few of them have been over whelmed on days when there seemed nothing to be feared. This is adequate excuse for the existence of the "giant wave" assumption, and yet we do not find even in the experience of the co-lossal Cunarder proof that it is founded on fact, proof that the sizes of the waves raised by one wind differ enormously among themselves. Differ they do to some extent beyond any question, and when any sequence of waves is made up of waves larger and smaller one of them must be the biggest of all. But it will be noticed that of the Cam-But it will be nonced that of the Campania it is said, probably without any thought of this problem, that "suddenly the big ship lurched to port and scooped up an enormous wave." Why so enormous? Any stalwart wave on a day when, to quote again, "a heavy quartering sea was running" would be quite big enough to do all that this wave did if "scooped up" by a ship moving at the Campania's speed, especially when the pottion. pecially when the motion of the ship is opposite to that of the wave itself and must be added to it in explaining the consequences. We remain convinced that on that disastrous Wednesday the Campania safely rode hundreds of waves nearly or quite as big as was the one that ravaged her steerage deck and drenched deep the deck above. Not impossibly bigger ones were passed without attracting any attention from her passengers. The "scooping up" is the heart of the myth, and the "giant Long Joseph, Seven Feet Ten Frederick the Great's father, Frederick William, the creator of the Prussian army, whose special mania was the collection of giants from all parts of the earth, would have given something like a king's ransom for "Long Joseph," who has just joined the First Foot guards at Potsdam at the age (twenty, with a weight of about eighteen stone and a stature of 7 feet 10 inches, an ugly man, decidedly, to meet in a bayonet melee. Frederick William had a whole regiment of such colossi, known as the Riesengarde, among the tallest of them being one Kirkman, a Scoto-Hibernian, or Ulster Irishman, whose portrait may still be seen in the palace at Charlottenburg. One of Frederick's first sovereign acts was to disband this preposterous bri gade of giants, which had cost the Prussian state about as much as all the rest of its army.—London Chron-

Turkey's Bad Forestry.

Forestry is neglected by the Turkish government, as witness the following emarks by an explorer: "The mos carked feature of all this eastern district is the entire absence of wood, no rom any natural condition, as trees yould evidently grow in most parts, but owing to willful destruction and neglect to replant. Firewood nov comes four and more days' journey to Erzerum and is in that city the most expensive household necessity, while the border, on the Russian side there are magnificent pine forests. This regrettable destruction extends all over Asiatic Turkey, square miles of forest being burned where as many square miles of clearing near some villages are desired. Around villages great walls of magnificent logs rise up, and around fields also, so that soon no forests will remain except in the most in accessible mountains."

Why Dubois Gets a Statue. Nice is to raise a monument to a cook -a Provencal chef, one Urbain Dubois. It is not for his soups, his entrees, his roasts or his pastry that Dubois is to be honored in stone. Provencals chiefly love his memory for his patriotism What Dubois sacrificed on the altar of his country was what some would de scribe as a "mighty good berth." He was chef to the king of Prussia when that sovereign went to war with France. Immediately on the news reaching him the chief of the kitchen marked his disagreement with the chie of the state by resigning. Considering that he lost $12,000 a year, it was a hard step to take. And that is why Dubois is to have his statue.

One of Hamilton's Business Men Passes Away After a Brief Illness.

Toronto, Nov. 22.-The death took place yesterday morning in Grace Hospital of Mr James Walker Hendrie of Hamilton. Mr. Hendrie, who was at Sturgeon Falls on business, took sud-denly ill at that place on Thursday last, uraemic poisoning developing, which was complicated with pneumonia. He was removed to Grace Hospital, and the family physicians from Hamilton, Dr. White and Dr. Edgar, called into consultation

Mr. Hendrie gradually sank, dying yesterday morning. Deceased was 46 years of age. He was the second son of Mr. William Hendrie of Hamilton and a brother of the Hon. John W. Hen drie, M. P. P. All the members of the family were present at the deathbed, including his sister, Mrs. A. D. Braithwaite of New York, and Mr. George M. Hendrie of Detroit. Mr. Hendrie started out as a rail-way contractor. He built the last 40 miles of the Northern Pacific into North Bay, and the old belt line around Toronto. During the past summer he acted as purser on the Northern Belle. of which he was part owner, a steamer which ran on Lake Nipissing.
