Why you take Cold and Cough. Generally caused by exposure to cold, wet feet, sitting in a draught, coming from hot and crowded places, in thin dress, or wearing damp clothes, stockings, or any other cause tending to check suddenly the perspiration. The result produces inflammation of the lining membrane of the lungs or throat, and this causes phlegm or matter, which nature tries to throw off by expectoration. In many cases she is unable to do so without assistance, and this

Rich cured in 20 minutes by W. Lee's Sanitary Lotion. Warranted by E. Lee Street.

A man went into an Alabama newspaper office the other day to kill the editor. There was a brief interview and then the editor wrote a touching obituary, in which the plea of self-defense was ingeniously introduced. Next day a note from the editor or a gas stove.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff. GROSSE ISLE, Que., May 18.—H. P. Gray, of the provincial board of health, Montreal, who has just made a minute inspection of the quarantine station here, states that he has seen nothing superior in New York and other American ports, to the present appliances at St. Lawrence quarantine station.

BERLIN, May 20.—At a meeting of medical societies last night Prof. Virchow said a recurrence of cholera any where in Germany this year was improbable. Having newspapers will be prosecuted for stating that Asiatic cholera had been found in that city.

CORK, May 18.—The nationalists of northeast Cork, who have been represented by Davitt, obliged to withdraw from parliament on account of the bankruptcy proceedings instituted against him for costs in the North Meath contest, have resolved to have the seat vacant in the expectation that Mr. Davitt will obtain from the court a certificate of bankruptcy enabling him again to enter parliament.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 19.—A despatch from Spokane says the floods through out Northern Idaho and the western part of the state are unprecedentedly high. The damage to railroads and crops is immense. Many families were obliged to flee to the hills for safety.

FAIRFIELD, Me., May 18.—The river is the highest for ten years. The Fairfield boom has broken and three million logs have gone down stream. They belong to Lawrence Newhall & Co., whose loss is heavy.

Youths Corner. TURN ABOUT. 'What are you after there, you blind buzzard, kicking our marbles every which way?' exclaimed Mike Garrity, as a ragged, clumsy little fellow came shambling along the street, while Mike and two other boys rather smaller than himself were preparing for a game of marbles. 'If you don't come out of that I'll bang daylight out of you.'

'There ain't no daylight in him, said George Gilchrist, as he gave the newcomer a gentle push to get him away from the ring that had been drawn. 'Ben Bowman can't see worth a cent.'

'Then what does he come along the street for?' said Mike. 'I've a mind to lick him, to make him stay at home and behave.'

'You'll have to lick me first. The chap ain't going to be no little fellow put up while I'm standing round,' said George Pennivel. The speaker was not more than an inch taller than Ben Bowman, and was a head shorter of Mike Garrity's height, but what there was of him was, as George Gilchrist said, 'a puny punk!'

'I could lick you with one hand tied behind me,' said the bully; 'but I ain't going to do it for no such little lobe as that there Ben Bowman, who is just fooling you fellows when he lets on that he's a little better than you are. When he goes stumbling along and musing up marbles, he does it out of meanness, and he may as well tell you the same thing. Ever since parson him late one night selling papers out younger to the side of the street.'

'Don't your father lick you for getting on to little boys?' said George Gilchrist. 'I should think your mother would make him licker than me, and he was most as big as me, mamma told papa, and papa gave me a hail calamity.'

'Ma ain't got nothing to do with it, and parson licks me when I get into a tussle and get the worst of it.'

'Papa wouldn't mind my tussling for those who can't tussle for themselves,' said Tom, 'and I don't believe Ben can, whatever you say about his seeing good. I know he can see well enough to tell a man from a house.'

'Then I s'pose my par is a liar?' said Mike. 'Just say it again and I'll put a lead on you.'

'He's got a head already, said George, 'and I am getting tired of standing out here in the sun listening to you fellows chime. If we are going to play, it's time we were at it.'

'I say so too,' said Mike. 'Me and you can have a game, but I ain't no notion to let them play with my marbles what calls par a liar.'

'All right,' said Tom. 'I didn't call you a liar, but I'd just as soon not stay where I ain't wanted, and it's about time I was going out to Uncle Albert's. Me and him are going out to Cypress Bayon fishing this afternoon, if he gets home in time.'

'Where is the log?' asked Tom bewildered.

'Here; if it was a dog it would lick you. Now you say there, and I'll have the dog here quicker than a flash.' He had caught Tom by the arm and plumped him down on a log by the roadside.

Ben started off at a run, and Tom had hardly become rested and restless before he heard a horse pass in a gallop, and Dr. Hawley's rights of the public and the demands of decency and order. A champion of the most honest, upright and able in an era, he was the mouth of a sewer, the only receptacle open to him in his pocket, and in putting it in that he needed help to carry it to the most honorable disposal, who added that, as a man, he was not made for human skins.

And this was the boy who could not go along the street any faster than a baby who has taken his first step only the week before!

Poor baby had a right for his life that night, for his trouble was unendurable, and if the doctor had come half an hour later, he need not have come at all; but, thanks to his skill, the sick child was so much better when Tom reached home that his mother was quite cheerful. After hearing of baby's improvement, Tom's next question was—

'Doctor, what is a nickalooops?' 'A what?'

'A nickalooops, Ben Bowman says that is what you say is he. He told me that, when I asked him how it was that he could get over the ground so well in the dark, when he can't walk worth a cent, not to say any for anything, but me.'

'Oh, my nellys, a person who can't see in the dark,' said the doctor. 'Did you ever notice that Ben's eyes are not like those of other people? The pupils contract so in a strong light that they seem to go away altogether, but in darkness he can see as well as an owl. When his mother complains of his being so little use to her on account of his bad eyes, I console her by proposing that, when he is bigger, he will make a No. 1 night watchman.'

'Has been a lot of use to you mamma, little as he is, for the doctor would not have been here in time if Ben had not run for him; but then I guess you must thank me for it after all, because when I thanked him he said he would not be any for anything, but me. You see, I take his part whenever any one wants to lick him for stumbling into things in the daytime.'

'That is right, Tom,' said the doctor. 'Always side with the under dog in the fight, and if you are not returned in any other way you will at least have the satisfaction of feeling that you acted like a gentleman.' Christian at work.

Farm and Household. MAKING GARDENS. It is worth while to give a little careful attention to getting the ground ready for making gardens. On the first day when it is possible to get out, rake up all the weeds and cut them in a pile in one corner of the yard. Leave, stumps, old roots and the like may be piled up a little earth thrown up around the side of the heap, leaving the top open. Upon the second day, when the ground is not so wet, and also preparing a most useful and valuable fertilizer for the garden beds. Any bit of soil or decayed vegetable are a useful addition to the soil, and they are some thoroughly soaked and are kept some distance from the house. A pair of strong trousers or slacks will do much toward hastening the process of decomposition, and the potash is an invaluable agent for destroying any germs of disease that may exist in such a place. A little care in this direction will provide a bumper of the most useful compost. This is excellent for lettuce and radish beds, and should be worked in to about three or four inches of the top soil. On heavy or clayey lands this may be still further improved and increased by the addition of ashes either from coal or wood. The ashes should be passed through a fine sieve, and the cinders or coal will remain in them. Add this to the compost heap, work the mass thoroughly into the garden beds, and the results will repay the labor of preparing it.—N. Y. Ledger.

BEDS AND BED COVERING. Beds ought to be neither too hard nor too soft, and mattresses and pillows of hair are best. Soft beds are always uncomfortable when it is cold to occupy an unaccustomed couch. They whose rest is spoiled by a hard bed never make good travelers or endure hardships cheerfully. To the well bedded person a couch of sponge is light in the North woods is better than any other. And who would be so hard on a bed of feathers as to say it is a snore of sleeping?

It is well also to be light and sufficiently warm. The old fashioned counterpane or unless made of cheese cloth, ought to be discarded in favor of modern blankets, which together with mattress ought to be frequently aired and sunned. Under-vests worn during the day should be changed at night and each set aired and sunned. Pillows need not be large, as it is mistake to raise the head high above the level of the body.

A RULE OF CONDUCT. One of our papers lays down this rule, the practical importance of which is not small: 'He who eats bananas in a public place, and refuses likewise to eat the skin, is morally bound to seek some fitting disposition where the said skin can be laid aside with full respect to the
