Evangelists in Newfoundland.

A Review of Their Work.

L. C. MORRIS.
ARTICLE III.

Just ten years after the visit of the first evangelist to this island, the first evangelist, the person of whose name we have written, came to our city, but we do not remember him, because his mission failed. He was under the auspices of the C. M. B. C. and he was invited and he had done a big work in his early life he was a clerk in the drug business, and he stated in his preaching that he knew whereof he spoke, when he referred to man physically. Perhaps he would have made a good lecturer for the body, from a medical standpoint; but he made a sorry plight of it as a dispenser of the Gospel of peace, to the poor cast-down and broken-hearted. Whatever talents he had for driving men, he displayed a lamentable lack in the gift of drawing them.

When he left for other parts I heard that he had a green spot in his heart for Newfoundland. He could not have had any other feeling, for the committee at least, as they treated him right royally; and though they were very much disappointed at the outcome of their labors, they did their duty to the utmost farthing. The difference in the impressions made by the three evangelists was very great. Two reached the heart, while the other apparently missed the goal; but no doubt all their motives were good. As to how many hearts were won, the latter evangelist really touched I never heard. There never was a report of his work. He came but he conquered not. His name has not been remembered, nor has his work been spoken of.

But perhaps that was only a local experience; for it was always understood that his work in the Province was a marked success; and it was upon his great record that the Y. M. C. A. invited him here. Of course we were not accustomed to tent preaching, nor to sitting on a camp stool for any length of time; and it has may have been, that between the two conditions, that of the novelty of the big tent and that of the lack of patience on the part of the preacher, the enemy got in, and marred the good work. But whatever it was, or whatever it was not, the visit of Mr. McKie was a failure, and he soon dropped out of the life and thought of the city—that is if he had really got within the life of our people. There are some men who are ever fresh in memory, and others whose names soon die out. The lesson of this evangelist's brief visit is worth remembering. It teaches us that even good men make mistakes, and that even those who preach may sometimes fall in measuring up to that high standard which they espouse, and it further teaches us, that self-control is at all times a becoming virtue; as Solomon of old said:—"He that ruleth his own spirit, is greater than he that taketh a city." Prov. 16:32.

Note.—My good friend Mr. Adrain reminds me that it was, in 1877 that the first evangelists came here.

INJURED GIRL DIES.—Glady Parsons, the victim of the shooting accident on Sunday night, died at the General Hospital last evening. A magisterial enquiry will be held on Thursday.

A Tribute to the Brave.

On the Home Coming of Our V.C. and the Royal Newfoundland Regiment.
All honour to our young V. C.
All glory to his name.
That shall for aye be written
On history's page of fame.

Newfoundland's sons are brave and true,
"And better than the best."
These sturdy young Colonials
Bravely have stood the test.

Nobly for us they lived and died,
Bravely they fought and fell
Mid din of battle, wars alarms,
Mid bursting shot and shell.

From East and West, from North and South,
Their precious lives they gave;
All honour to their memory,
Who sleep among the brave.

Then welcome welcome home again,
We greet you one and all,
Who ventured forth to do or die,
At your loved country's call.

And one a lad of tender years
On chivalry intent:
(From far down north in White Bay,
Sailed with "Our Regiment."

See him upon the battlefield!
Nobly he plays his part:
For thoughts of danger or of fear
Are unknown to his boyish heart.

Our King receives the gallant lad,
Newfoundland's honoured son,
And compliments him warmly
On the victory he has won.

And now he sails back o'er the foam,
And looking at his best,
Modest and unassuming, but with
A V. C. on his breast.

Oh honoured lad! Oh soldier youth!
A hero to the core.
With joy we hail your coming,
And greet you home once more.

We are with you Sergeant Ricketts:
We appreciate your work,
For the honour gained "Our Regiment,"
And the island of your birth.

And thro' coming years when tales
Are told
Of brave deeds, honours, fame,
Generations yet unborn
Will live to bless his name.

God bless our noble young V. C.
May fortune on him smile:
And coming years, true pleasures
Bring,
The hero of our Isle.

For Truth and Liberty and Right
Firm was his ever true stand,
Peaceful and pure and true and good,
Kept by a Father's hand.

Obituary.

January 12th had just come to a close and a new day was about to dawn upon the world, when death severed another tender thread of life, and the soul of Mrs. Daniel Cleary (nee Miss Jane Battcock), passed into the Great Unknown. Deceased lady had just reached her 85th year. Death was due to a complication of internal diseases. She was ever patient in suffering, and made little of her illness. She was perfectly resigned to God's Will, and her passing was very peaceful. On Thursday, January 16th, her remains were laid to rest in the R. C. Cemetery, where the Rev. S. J. Whelan, D.D., officiated. A husband, two daughters, Ellen, and Winifred, two brothers and a large circle of friends are left to mourn.—R. I. P.

CORRESPONDENT.

Hypnotised Into It.

New York, Feb. 11.—Although Roy A. Lusk, manufacturer of mustard and spices, insisted that he had never been married to Louise Lusk, Supreme Court Justice Delahanty granted her a decree of separation and $100 a month alimony. The court pointed out that Lusk had frequently introduced her as his wife.

The manufacturer's defense was that he had been "hypnotized" into a state of affinity back in 1889. He testified:

"I was only 17 years old when I met her. She was 12 years my senior. She came into my father's store in Albany, N.Y., and asked me to drive her to her home. Before we reached our destination she put her arms around me while we were sitting in the buggy and began to hug and kiss me. She was the first woman who had shown me affection and she had me hypnotized."

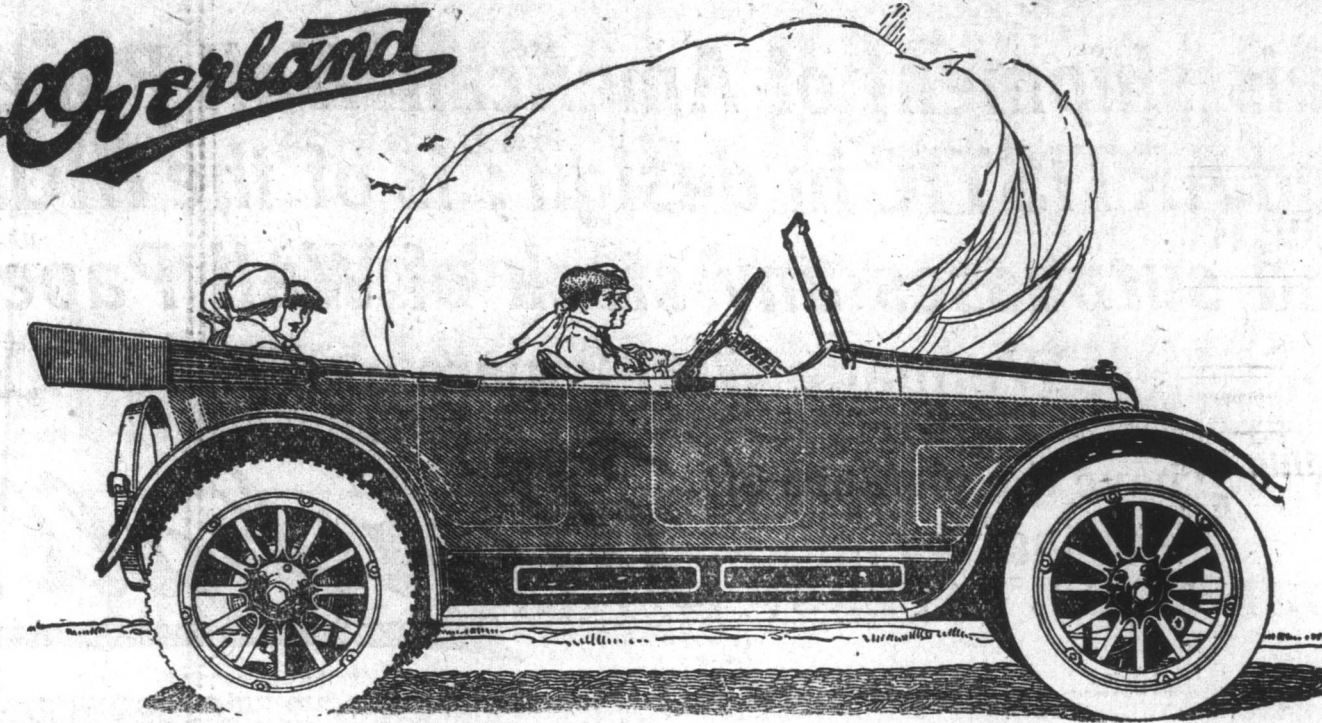

"And what was your attitude?" asked Justice Delahanty.

"I thought it was the grandest thing that ever was," replied Lusk, who is now forty-seven. "Since then I have prayed for deliverance," he replied.

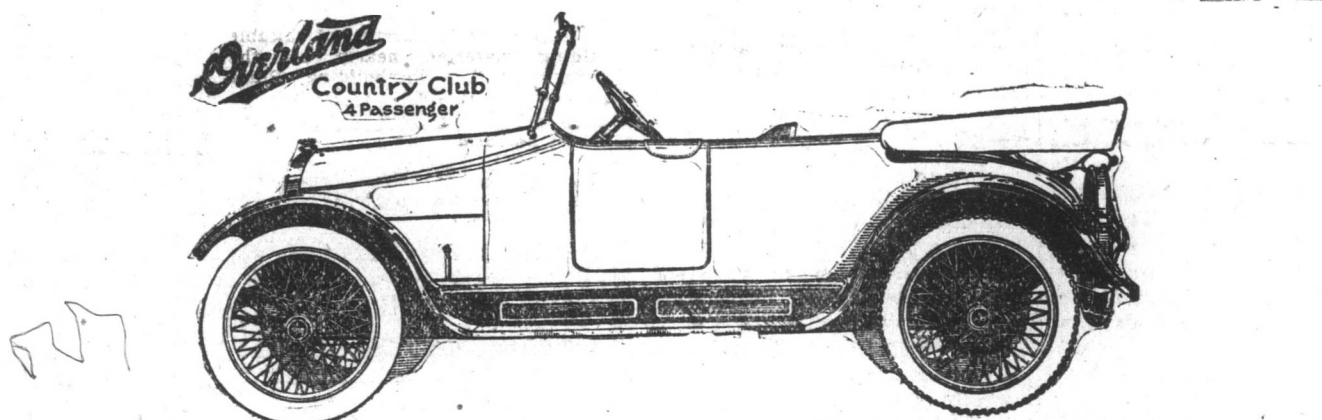

AT THE CASINO.—To-night at the Casino Peg o' My Heart will be presented in aid of Mount Cashel Orphanage, under the direction of Mr. T. H. O'Neill. The C.C.C. Band will attend, and Capt. Campbell and Mr. A. Williams will render songs, and an enjoyable time is assured.
