

Getting Full Value out of a Garment

After you have worn a blouse, a dress, a gown, a suit for a while, dye it a slightly darker shade with SUNSET. Garments may be dyed several times in this manner and you get out of every dress all the wear there is in it plus the renewed pleasure of several new dresses.

Remember that SUNSET colors may be combined to produce any "wanted" shade or tone—fast—even deep—brilliant.

Each successive dyeing gives up the garment because SUNSET cleans while it dyes and very largely renews the original freshness of the fabric. SUNSET really gives you more than the full value of a garment, it gives you several garments in one, at trifling additional cost.

Queen's daughter was to be married to a Duke of Argyll's son—to Marquis of Lorne. "Ay, ay, did you tell me that?" "Well, well, it's the proud man's to Queen will be this day." Dear old Queen Victoria and the Marquis of Lorne of happy memory.

On the occasion aforesaid there was, of course, great national rejoicing, and the town of Inverness was, like every other Municipality, illuminated at night. "Dear me, Donald," exclaimed one local shopkeeper to another, as he issued from his own door, "did you ever behold the likes of that? There's five-fourths of the whole town under illuminations this night." "Hoots, man, Angus, I'll thought that you know better than spoke like that," replied his neighbor. "A fourth is a quarter, and five quarters would be more than the whole." "Och, Donald Fraser, my lad," retorted Angus, "I've seen too many snowy days not to know what I'll say. I've got cloths in my own shop six-quarters, and that is more there, now, with your ignorance."

The following is an amusing instance of the tenacity with which the Highlanders hold to the honours and antiquity of their kindred. A dispute arose between a Campbell and a McLean upon the never-ending subject. The McLean would not allow that the Campbells had any right to rank with his clan in the matter of antiquity, who, he insisted, were in existence as a clan from the beginning of the world. Campbell had a little more Biblical lore than his antagonist, and asked him if the Clan McLean was before the flood. "Flood! what flood?" demanded the McLean. "The flood that you know drowned all the world but Noah and his family, and his flocks and herds," said Campbell. "Flood, you and your flood too," said the McLean. "My clan was before a flood." "I have not read in the Bible," said Campbell, "of the name McLean going into Noah's Ark." "Noah's Ark!" snorted the McLean, "who ever heard of a McLean that had not a boat of his own?"

Highlanders are good business men. Whether they take the high road, or the low road, nobody will get the better of them. They make good soldiers, good policemen, and faithful watchmen and shepherds. Forgetting with one tending his sheep on the verdant slopes of a Northern mountain one day, a company of English tourists thought to have some entertainment at his expense, and began by remarking that he seemed to be enjoying himself.

"Och, ay," said the shepherd, "I'm shoost lookin' about me here." "And what are you looking about you for?" inquired another. "Och, shoost because it's a fine view from this side o' the hill." "Yes, but what can you see from here?" "Well, if there was no mist to day I would see to town, and to boats on to loch, and many more things, whatever."

"I suppose you can see a great distance from here on a clear day?" remarked one. "Och, yes, shentlemen, a great distance, indeed," said the shepherd. "I suppose on a clear day now, you can see London from this extreme altitude?" exclaimed one of the cockneys, quizzing the countryman, and nudging his companions. "Och, ay, and much further than that, too," replied the shepherd, who had perceived the nudge. "Further than London," gasped two of the somewhat alarmed tourists.

"Ay, to be shurely, and further than America, too," replied the Highlander.

"Further than America?" shouted all the cockneys together. "Impossible!"

"It's shoost true what I tell you whatever," said Donald, "but if you'll not believe me, shoost sit down there, and look out your flask and took a dram, and wait for two oors and more, and if the mist will clear

There was a fine exhibition of clan pride afforded during the years the late Earl of Airlie acted as Lord High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. Amongst his attendants at Holyrood Palace, Edinburgh, were two pipers, who at every dinner given to the clergy and other guests at the palace, marched several times round the large dining-hall playing the wild and inspiring music of the Highlands. One evening the Moderator of the Assembly, at some one's request, asked his Grace whether he had any objections to instruct the pipers to play "The Bonnie House o' Airlie."

"None whatever," replied the Earl, "but I doubt whether we shall get it, for the one piper is an Ogilvie and the other is a Campbell; but we shall see." Calling the butler, he gave orders that when the pipers next came in they should play "The Bonnie House o' Airlie." The butler went at once with the message. By and by the pipers were heard approaching, and in a little, one player, the Ogilvie, marched in playing the desired tune with great dignity and vigour. "I expected this," said the Earl in a jocular way to the Moderator. Summoning the butler again, he asked whether his message had been delivered.

"Yes, my lord."

"Then why has Campbell not come in with Ogilvie?"

"I gave him your message, my lord."

"What did he say then?"

The man hesitated.

"What did Campbell say?" again demanded the Earl.

"He said—oh—still hesitating—he said he would see your Lordship. The rest of the sentence was lost in a cough and the skirl of Ogilvie's pipes."

"And music first on earth was heard. In Gaelic accents, the pipers sang. When Jubal in his oxen-squeezed The blether o' a sheep."

A WONDERFUL TRAIN.

The most notable train of motive power ever moved, recently passed over the tracks between the plant of the Baldwin Locomotive Company and the yards of the Southern Pacific Lines. The train consisted of 30 locomotives, having a length, without the propelling engines, of over 2000 feet and a weight of 4000 tons. This strange manner of shipment was the result of a brilliant advertising idea on the part of S. M. Vauclain, President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. The train moved off from the Baldwin Works, amidst a wonderful demonstration made by the thousands assembled to witness this unique sight. The train took 26 days to reach Los Angeles, and all along the route large crowds assembled to give it an ovation. An excellent account of the trip, illustrated with wonderful panoramic photographs, appears in the Baldwin Magazine for October.

SILVIA'S PASSENGERS WILL WIN.

Passengers who sailed by S.S. Silvia to-day will have an opportunity of witnessing the second heat of the Elimination Races which will decide the Nova Scotia vessel that will represent Canada in the International Fishing Schooner Race. The Silvia is due at Halifax early Monday and arrangements have been made for the ship to leave Campbell's wharf at 9.30 a.m. with an excursion party, consisting of about 200 people. The first race, in which four schooners will compete, takes place off Halifax today, and the second competition will be held Monday morning finishing at 4.30 p.m. The trip, including buffet lunch will cost the excursionists $6 each. The Silvia will not be delayed on her regular schedule by the extra trip.
