THE MARKET SITE

A large number of people of the city are not in accord with the mayor in favoring the site by the Langevin bridge for the city market. Many believe that the Cushing property would be very much more favorable.

However, it is not very wise to get into a controversy upon a subject of this kind or all sites will be decided. It might be well if the city would refer both sites to the public in the form of a plebiscite, and then decide upon the site favored, just as the public library was selected.

BACK TO THE BEGINNING

The government papers in their effort to get something to divert the interest of the people from the real issues, have completed the orbit, are right around at the beginning again.

Any future government undertaking to withdraw the suit against the C.P.R. or turn it over to the C.P.R. would not last in power for any length of time. It couldn't exist for a portion of a year. It would be down and out just as soon as any such policy was announced.

That must be evident to every person. The very people making the first break in opposition are the Liberal members and the Liberal newspapers, who have had nerve enough to come out and oppose the present government when they found it so very wrong in this railway transaction.

HUSH!

The attitude of the man Minty and the man Clarke during the entire A. & G. W. railway transactions, as shown in the correspondence, which has been made public concerning these matters, seems to have been not unlike that of men who having got a good hold on the swag, were making their best efforts to get away with it before any member of the family awoke. There is a continued "hush" about it. Ever since the first move was made there has been an attempt to keep things from coming out.

"It is necessary to keep as quiet as possible," writes Bowen to Clarke, "I have not seen the premier's speech from the throne, but I trust he made no special references to our interests.

"Few details should go into the government guarantee act, as they might provoke too much discussion in the house." Why too much discussion? "At another time Mr. Minty writes that 'we must be careful to avoid any reference that might provoke debate.' And nothing provoked debate in the house when the measure went through. One member of the house rose up to ask a plain and reasonable question and he was misinformed, and that was the last of it.

And they are keeping it up to the man Clarke's declining to come to Alberta to tell how it all happened and Minty sits tight and will say nothing. Now, who can support an outfit of that kind, particularly in a transaction which has been shown to be so terribly bad as the A. & G. W.

THE LACROSSE GAME

The good old lacrosse game, the National game of Canada, and the best of them all, has fallen upon evil days in the province of Alberta. Last year there was no Senior league and this year it seems that there will be no strong Senior league. There are some very good lacrosse players in this city and Calgary has a very excellent team, but it has no competitor.

This is very unfortunate. The lacrosse game is a sturdy, hard, rough game. It is not a pastime for molly-coddles, but the recreation of stalwart, sturdy men. The game should thrive in this country, for it is the sport of giants and here it is where the best of the human race is found.

not so widely known, or because it requires more careful and arduous training. It is not progressing as satisfactorily as the national game of our southern neighbors, which is taking such a hold upon the people of the province. It, too, is a good game, but there should be room for both in Alberta.

It is unfortunate that the game is not getting a firmer hold in the province. It is possible that the real reason is that Calgary is too strong, compared with the teams that might be organized in the other cities and towns. This could be averted by Calgary organizing more than one team. This was tried this spring, but it failed for some reason or other.

A VICIOUS EFFORT

The people of Alberta are very anxious to know all about this iniquitous railway transaction. It is their money that is being spent by the government, and they want to find out if it is being spent in the right way. The man Clarke, who is getting the money, and the man Minty, his partner, decline to inform the public about the details of this transaction. Can any person believe that such efforts would be made to conceal the facts if the transaction was right and proper and in every respect above board? Why are they so very anxious to conceal the facts which the people are anxious to get at, and which the people should have?

CHRONICLES OF THE KHAN

A Tiff in the Family

"That isn't correct," said Aunt Lucy, with a frown. "It's quite proper, just the same," retorted Phoebe. "Old Twilight opened his mouth, but shut it again, and Big Bill, who was fanning a hole in a grain bag, looked uneasy. Aunt Lucy felt that she had to rise to the occasion, and she rose. "What's the diff?" queried Old Twilight. Even as you or I, he hates a scene.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Sunday street cars in Edmonton are operating at a loss. The people in the north should get in the habit of going to church, and the city might get a fare now and then.

Not in our time has such efforts been made by any person on earth to keep from divulging the facts, as Clarke, Minty and the others are making. Are these efforts being made to conceal the details of an honest and upright transaction?

There is a certain speediness about the Alberta government, which is interesting to watch. There is the midnight flight with the files, and the midday flight of Mr. Minty, both dramatic and sensational, but neither meaning anything, of course, of course.

Some people are discussing the moisture question and are inclined to be somewhat anxious for rain. We are having the usual amount of moisture for the month, but the weather has been so very fine that the season is more than a month ahead of time. The moisture will drop on us in good time.

A Gallician homesteader attempted to sell some Edmonton people rocks, believing them to be diamonds, and Edmonton people call him insane. The last time such a play was made the Edmonton government stood for the proposition and called the man a great railway builder and gave him $20,000 a mile, and even greater favors. It was a different time of the moon then.

The evidence in the royal commission became so bulky and voluminous that the Albertan decided to eliminate the publication of further verbatim reports. However, having received a large number of requests for publication, the Albertan will resume the full reports. It regrets that the space in the paper is so limited that it will be unable to print more than three or four columns a day.

For some time a Calgary newspaper has been weeping because the Albertan at one time did such terrible things to Hon. W. T. Finlay. What the Albertan did was to criticize Mr. Finlay for uniting with the Edmonton ministers and placing the university in the northern part of the province. The Albertan believed at that time that the university should not be placed in Edmonton or Strathcona and that that opinion, still and has no apology, to offer for censuring Mr. Finlay for the action he took. If the evening paper endorses Mr. Finlay in his course, it has a perfect right to do so.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR

(New York Press.)

Love letters are certificates of imbecility. Mighty little comes of trying to do too much. Good fellows in the crowd are bad providers in the family. A big family can keep a man out of most other temptations. The first thing a man gets over when he marries a woman is making love to her.

THE KHAN, IN TORONTO

Your tongue is coated. Your breath is foul. Headaches come and go. These symptoms show that your stomach is the trouble. To remove the cause is the first thing, and Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will do that. Easy to take and most effective. Sold by all Druggists.

"I'll give you gloves," protested the Britisher. "Here's the gloves," says Pat, "place them where ye please." "The world is full of too much red tape, and that's perfectly correct. It ain't got half 'nuff in the milk of human kindness, an' that's perfectly proper. If the preachers would only do the proper thing, and drop the correct thing for a while, Heaven wouldn't be 'nuff to hold the folks that would go there. The idea of measuring a man for his religion is then make him wear it whether it becomes him or not, is all wrong. Some folks are so correct that they are perfectly impossible. There were two young men mentioned in the Bible: one was Joseph and the other was David—one was correct and the other wasn't exactly. But which do we love the best? When it comes down to the fine point, David always did the proper thing, an' he wasn't particular whether it was 'cordiv' to the rules of the Sanhedrin or not. Hapoun Al Raschid wasn't quite the correct thing, but, Lord, Phoebe, I wouldn't like to put out that fine old sport from my repository.

"The trouble with these here correct people is that though you dislike them, you don't want to put out that fine old sport from my repository. They can snub you, cut you, slander you, and you can't do a damned thing. 'Hate protects itself by doing the correct thing.' Love often gets into trouble by doin' the proper thing; and if there's anything more pathetic than that I'd like to know it."

"What air you goin' to do?" queried Aunt Lucy. "I'm goin' to do the proper thing," said Phoebe. "Well, you ain't do it, then!" snapped Aunt Lucy. Putting Things In Big Bill went into the bank this morning and wrote off a check. "But you haven't put anything in," objected the manager. "Do I have to put something in?" inquired poor Bill. "Why, certainly, you can't expect to get something out if you don't put something in."

"A bank is just like a garden or a milk cow," explained Bill to me that evening. "You can't get nothing out unless you put something in."

THE SINGING LESSON

It's right at the corner of the house in a basement—the last is—and the old folks have certainly broken the record. Who ever heard of young Phoebe being half-dead in the middle of April? When it is nice and warm at noon they hang on the edge of the nest and stare up at the wonderful sky, and the still more wonderful earth; but chiefly do they watch their parents winging across the far pastures bearing them bits of sweet, toothsome grub, and perfectly delicious cut worms.

A PARROT'S MEMORY

Calls to Sailer Who Owned It Seven Years Ago

(From the New York Press.)

Seven years ago someone stole a parrot from Robert Turner, a deep-water sailor, who had been working in Boonton, this state. The bird had been the boon companion of Turner for eleven years before that, and had made two trips around the world with him. Turner found his parrot today; or, to be more accurate, the parrot found him. Fully recognized him by his voice, called him, and manifested every evidence of delight at seeing him again, although the bird had not been held him for seven years.

"Talk about a memory!" Turner said, proudly. "Why, I've known lots of women in my time who couldn't remember me seven years."
