Frenchman Keeps 700 Soldiers at Bay for Ten Days.

BOMBS USED TO ROUT HIM

After Stronghold Is Blown Up He Flees, But Is Pursued and Captured.

Paris, June 5. - Since the Three Musketeers held their bastion agains a whole army France has witnessed ome novel sieges, but never a sturdier defense than that made by Francis Roy, the gamekeeper, who recently kept 700 gendarmes and troops at bay for ten days.

Roy is a peppery tempered old fel-low of 70, but still remarkably spry on his legs and tough as hickory. He had been a soldier in his earlier days. Later he had become a gamekeeper, and was suspected of using that office to facilitate his own exploits as a poacher. Anyhow he was accused of preying on the game he was paid to protect, and lost his situation in consequence. He swore to be revenged on those who had caused him to be deprived of his situation. At the first chance he fired on one of the men who had lodged information against him. That brought and prepared it to withstand a siege Standing alone on a slight eminence in the village of Usseau, near Chatellerit was well situated for defense.
