

LONDON BATTERY LEAVES JUNE 8

Annual Drill Will Then Be Held on the Petawawa
Training Grounds.

10 BATTERIES THERE

Some Interesting Facts Concerning
This Famous Place Where War
Is Played.

In view of the fact that the Sixth London Field Battery leaves for its annual training at Petawawa on the 8th of June, a few words describing this camping ground may prove of interest.

It is situated about 100 miles above the Dominion capital on the Ottawa River, and is about ten miles west of the town of Pembroke. The Government property covers a tract of land of about 50 square miles, and in that area is enclosed almost every possible kind of surface, from flat plain to steep hill. That part of the ground set apart for the actual camps is on a bluff overlooking the Ottawa River. In some ways reminding a Londoner of Port Stanley, if one makes allowance for the wild appearance of the surrounding country. The river is several miles wide at this point, and on the Quebec side almost directly opposite the camp is a summer resort called Fort William, much frequented by people from Pembroke and the neighboring towns. Further off are the hills that form the watershed on the north, and the view from the camp looking over the river towards the hills is one that is truly beautiful.

The prospects for receiving such a large area for artillery practice becomes apparent even to the layman, when it is pointed out that the actual range of a modern field gun is about two and a half miles, and that of the larger modern guns is from four to five miles. The ranges are situated some five miles from the camp, and still another part of the ground is allotted to ordinary drill and manoeuvre. The soil is very sandy and absorbs the rain even more rapidly than is the case at Carling's Heights. Part of the area is covered with scrub brush, and in some places there are fairly thick woods and some small lakes.

The facilities provided at the camp are excellent. Water is piped to all the camp sites, and wash troughs and shower baths are provided for all units. Drinking troughs for horses are placed near each horse line, and the necessity for taking the animals a long way to water them is thus done away with. A complete system of sewers is operated, and the chances of exposure to disease is reduced to a minimum. The water is piped a long distance, and is sweet and pure, while the benefit of a shower bath or a swim in the river after work can easily be imagined. All the horses that went up with the London Battery in 1907 put on flesh, as all the conditions appeared to agree with them, and this year the various improvements should better matters considerably still.

Ten Batteries. There will be ten more field batteries training at about the same time as the London Battery, and the competition between them all will be very keen. They are all attached to the Canadian Artillery Association, which donates annually a large number of cups and money prizes. Some of the prizes are for the best battery as a whole, but there are a good number of individual prizes in each unit.

These are awarded to the members of each battery for efficiency in the different parts of the work, such as signalling, gunnery, riding, etc. These money prizes vary in value from $10 down, and with most of them there is also given a badge which the winner is entitled to wear on his arm when in uniform. From this it will be seen that a member of the London Battery stands a good chance of making something besides his actual pay while at Petawawa. The actual gun practice of the London Field Battery will this year be carried out under normal conditions, the enemy at some given place at a certain time, and there the commanding officer is handed an order, which instructs him to engage the enemy at some place, and he then takes his battery to that place and after locating the dummies (representing the enemy) he engages them in the manner ordered. The range is secured by firing a series of trial shots, and it is often very difficult to get it properly.

Shooting at Dummies. The wooden dummies representing the enemy are by no means easy to see at a distance of some miles, and if the day is wet it is sometimes practically impossible to see whether the shots are hitting them or not. There are three different series of dummies, including one at a rapidly-moving target and the battery that gets the most hits on all three, wins the cup for target practice. The umpires consider that the work was carried out in a soldierly and workmanlike manner. It can easily be understood that the success of the battery depends as much on the work of each gunner and driver as it does on the officers and that is the great reason why the art of the service is so much more attractive to the average man, than the other branches. It is interesting, scientific, and each battery is given a chance to show its prowess otherwise of its unit depends in no small measure on its own work.

Mimic War. The main line of the Canadian Pacific runs through the training ground, and many a tourist looking out of his car window and wondering when he saw guns being fired and batteries trotting and galloping from place to place, has been told that the army is going to the front. The fact is that the troops are coming in and unloading at the same time without inconveniencing one another, which is a great point in favor of the army. The fact is that the army is going to the front, and the fact is that the army is going to the front.

In addition to the many advantages of the Petawawa training camp, the recreation part of it is not overlooked. A large space has been fenced off for the men to indulge in games and sports. A football field, a baseball diamond, and a basketball court are provided, and also a large area for the men to play on. The fact is that the army is going to the front, and the fact is that the army is going to the front.

The London Field Battery will travel to Petawawa by the C. P. R. in a special train, consisting of four passenger coaches, four horse cars (pulled by four flat cars), and baggage and mail cars. The train will leave London on June 8, and will reach Petawawa on June 10. The fact is that the army is going to the front, and the fact is that the army is going to the front.

Sergeant Major Leonard Plimley, of the Royal Horse Artillery at Kingston, arrived in London last week and is now busy every evening at instructional work to prepare the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men as much as possible for camp. He will remain with the battery during their entire training, and much benefit ought to accrue from his instruction. He understands the work from beginning to end, and has the knack of imparting his knowledge to those he is instructing in a pleasant and effective manner. He has already made several helpful suggestions to Major Leonard about camp arrangements, and it is hoped that some other changes will be made at his suggestion which cannot but be of great assistance to the commanding officer.

Getting in Shape. The London battery is now being carefully organized for camp, and although Tuesday and Thursday are the regular drill nights, some of the officers and men are down every night in the week getting in shape. Major Leonard has not yet picked out his complete number of sergeants and corporals, but they will be done within the next week, so that all gunners and drivers can be posted to their sub-units before leaving London. There are still some vacancies in the ranks to complete the establishment and those who are contemplating joining the battery should do so within the next few days, as the total number of men to be taken of all ranks is only one hundred and twenty. It is confidently hoped that Londoners will have every reason to be proud of the local battery, and a great deal of interest is being expressed about Petawawa and the annual camp. A royal salute of 21 guns will be fired on June 3, the King's birthday, at noon, and it is of interest to note that this battery will probably be the last time the battery will turn out mounted to perform this duty. It is the intention of the battery to install a saluting battery of guns permanently in Victoria Park in the near future, and when this is done these will be used for salutes instead of the more modern field guns with which the battery is armed.

Coronation Representative. Major Woodman Leonard yesterday received word from Quartermaster Sergeant Scott, the battery representative on the coronation contingent, that he reached Kingston safely and that he was being sent to the coronation with the other representatives getting in shape for the trip. Sergeant Scott is reaping the reward of faithful service in the battery, as he joined it in 1905 and has worked hard to help the officers and men ever since. The next five years might be interesting ones for the Canadian militia with the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General. He is a keen soldier, and will no doubt take more interest in the militia than any previous viceroy. There will also probably be some very large reviews during his regime, and
