EUROPEANS FLEEING FROM HIS APPROACH.

Egypt's Difficulty in Evacuating the Soudan-The Civil Population Ordered

CAIRO, Jan. 11.—The ministry of war in a statement regarding the proposed evacuation of the Soudan shows that there are 21,000 men and 84 guns there. The removal to Khartoum of the ammunition stored at Kassala would require four thousand camels or six thousand if the material on the Abyssinian frontier should also be removed. The march from Berber to Wadyhalfa through the desert would be impossible. It would be necessary to make the journey by the river, which would take three months and require 1300 boats. Several Bedouin tribes along the Nile between Khartoum and Berber have declared for El Mahdi. Orders have been sent to Khartoum for the civil population to quit the town im-

THE CELTIC AT SEA.

Four of Her Passengers Landed at Fal-London, Jan. 11.-The steamer Argosy, from New York has arrived off the Lizard. She met the steamer Celtic 1250 miles out and took off several of her passengers, whom she transferred to a tug bound to Falmouth. The Celtic was perfectly seaworthy and amply supplied with provisions. Her captain was in hopes of being picked up by the Brittania. More of the Celtic's passengers would have gone on board the Argosy if the latter could have accommodated them.

Four passengers from the Celtic have landed at Falmouth. They state that at one time the gale was so heavy the Celtic's sails were blown out of the ropes. All the canvas on board the steamer was utilized. The Rothnia was sighted Dec. 29. Only whom she transferred to a tug bound to

HAMILTON'S HAUNTED CELLS.

SATURDAY MORNING. JANUARY 12, 1884.

The Ghost of McConnell, the Murdere Said to Walk the Corridors of the Jail. Eight years ago Michael McConnell, a Hamilton butcher, murdered Mr. Nelson Mills, a gentleman living in the west end of the ambitious city. McConnell was form Candidate A Joint Meeting with hanged for the crime March 14, 1876, and Much Talking. the Hamilton Spectator states the jail is now believed to be haunted by the spectre of the murderer. Says the Spectator: With McConnell's death it might reas onably be supposed that the affair would end, but it seems that his perturbed spirit ground and stubbornly persists in haunting the east yard, and what is known as the the east yard, and what is known as the east basement corridor. On the western side of the corridor the "black holes" or punishment cells are situated. These are small apartments provided with nothing. Prisoners are put there for 6, 12 and 24 hours, according to the nature of the offense. Now a man might naturally be presumed to have a horror of staying in a dark and comfortless cell, but prisoners dread to go, not only for that reason, but because they declare they are haunted by the ghost of the man who was hanged on that wild March morning so many years might, and every time she nears the slight-est noise down-stairs, the poor woman starts up in the bed and endeavors to grasp a descending axe in the hands of an imagin-ary man. It is feared her reason, if not her life, is in danger. Mr. Burke feels his position keenly and wept bitterly while Henry Boyd was arraigned, but in consequence of Mrs. Burke's ab ence the case was adjourned until the 18th.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S REPLY TO THE CIVIC ADDRESS.

to the queen city yesterday at the hands of the mayor and corporation. The affair was attended with the usual ceremony and passed off quietly. The vice regal party will not rest quietly beneath the cold, cold arrived at the city hall a few minutes after 3 o'clock, having been escorted from government house by a detachment of the government. ernor-general's body guard, com. manded by Capt. Dunn. A guard called, Of myself, sir, I will only say this, that it is a source of infinite satisfaction to me to find myself in a position which gives me opportunities greater than those of others for visiting and acquiring a knowledge of this portion of the queen's dominions, which enables me to take a part in the administration of its public affairs, and to become acquainted with the men who, whatever their rank, party or place of origin, whether they are associated with federal or with provincial or with municipal government are shaping its future destinies. And now, sir, allow me to express the pleasure with which I find myself in the city of Toronto, a pleasure which is certainly increased by the fact that your citizens were the first to make known to me after my arrival here their desire that I should pay them a visit. But, gentlemen, irrespectively of this I was desirous to visit Toronto because I felt that until I had done so I should fail to realize what manner of country Canada really was. You have spoken in your address of the comparative youth of your institutions, and you have reminded me that your civic history may be said to have commenced only fifty years ago. Fifty years ago is, no doubt, a very insignificant space in the lifetime of a nation or of a city, but whatever may be our respect for antiquity we cannot forget that it is the use which a nation or a city has made of its life and not merely the length of its duration which entities it to respect. [Hear, hear] Judged by this standard the position of Toronto is one of which the dominion and the empire of which it forms a part may well be proud, I doubt indeed whether there is any city in the world more remarkable than yours for the variety of the successes which it has achieved in a short space of time. [Hear, hear.] It is the seat of the legislature of this great province and the theatre of its political activity; it is the metropolis of a great agricultural district; it is the home of numerous and thriving industries; it is the abode of our provincial their influence felt, and which are spreading, not only over this province, but over the whole of the North American continent that culture without which material prosperity may become a curse rather than a blessing. As I passed through your spacious thoroughfares and observed not only the admirable public buildings and commercial premises which meet the eye at every step, but also the general evidences of comfort and well being, for which it appears to me Toronto is more remarkable than any city which I have ever visited, I thought that I could well understand that, being citizens of such a city, you should be not only proud but jeaolus of it, and that while you are ready to spend your energies and your fortunes in its advancement, you should resent any action, whether on the part of public or of private bodies, which might impair the pr sperity of your home or lower the general standard of comfort and order which obtains within it. I have made this observation because I am aware that there is an impression in some quarters, possibly an impression in some quarters, possibly an impression that the stream of immigration which has recently set towards your shores needs more careful regulation, and that if it is not so regulated they are liable to be invaded by a class of persons of whom the old country is anxious to be rid, but who would be by no means a valuable accession to the new. Now, sir, I have had some opportunity of observing these matters, both from the point of view from which they are regarded on the other side of the Atlantic, and what I would venture to impress on you is that there is absolutely no divergence of opinion at home. [Hear, hear.] Nothing has been further from the thoughts of the imperial government, or of the private promoters of emigration, than the idea of sending to this country persons who are not able to take their place as useful members of society in the land of their adoption. I rejoice that this subject is being treated in somewhat of a critical spirit on this side. The more li tury and is increasing at a geometrical rate. It is inevitable that a portion of itshould seek its fortunes abroad, and as a matter of fact that is the case aiready. Is it unreasonable to suggest that if these people are to leave the country of their birth we should do all we can to induce them to remain subjects of the crown, and to take their share in the development of that vast inheritance which Canadian enterprise besteened but to their the High Compliment to Toronto-The Immigration Question—Reception of Cit-izens—An Array of Military.

more variegated than last year. Less white was worn. Those wearing flowers were few, and bouquets still fewer. Quite a number of the ladies wore their hair powdered.

Many members of the yacht club wore their dress uniforms; the scarlet coats of the Grenadters were numerous, as were also the dark green of the Queen's Own. The still brighter uniforms of the artillery and cavalry volunteer corps were also noticed. Commander Law, R.N., wore the brilliant uniform of his rank. Capt. Streathfield, A.D.C., wore the uniform of the Grenadier. Guards. the Grenadier Guards. Lord Melgund was also in uniform and on his breast were several medals. He has quite a dashing appearance.

Among the other guests were Sheriff Jarvis, Chief Justice Wilson, Mr. Coleridge (son of the lord chief justice of England). and).

Lue scene in the ball room was one of gaiety and movement. Every dance saw the floor fully occupied. Seager's orches-tra of twenty-two performers supplied elegant music. Lady Lansdowne took part in several dances.

Over one thousand invitations were sent out and 980 of them accepted. There were not less than 900 persons in the ball room and galleries. The officers of the club are : Commodore The officers of the club are: Commodore A. R. Boswell, Vice-Commodore John Leys, Rear Commodore J. W. Anderson, Hon. Secretary and Treasurer H.
