

Considerable business came up before the meeting. The officers of the Literary Society were nominated for next session. The staff of the College Journal was also nominated for next year. Judges were appointed in connection with the English and French competitions. It was agreed to ask the following gentlemen to act: Rev. Messrs. Reid, Dobson and MacKeracher; Rev. Prof. Coussirat and Rev. Messrs. Bruneau and Duolos.

The first item on the programme was a vocal solo by Mr. A. G. Cameron, which called forth the patriotic feeling of all Scotchmen present.

Mr. R. J. Douglas, B.A., introduced the subject of discussion, which was: "Resolved, that scholarships promote the true aim of theological colleges." Mr. Hector Mackay followed for the negative, and then the debate was thrown open. Mr. George MacGregor acted as critic for the evening.

The monthly meeting of the Missionary Society was held on Friday evening, February 10th.

The interesting programme arranged by the executive committee was appreciated by all present.

Mr. N. V. McLeod rendered a vocal solo, delighting all his hearers.

Mr. W. J. Inglis, B.A., then followed with a paper entitled, "Christianity and Social Progress."

Rev. Ephraim Scott, M.A., editor of the Presbyterian Record, delivered a very interesting address on "The Beginnings of Foreign Missions."

Mr. Scott first took up the grounds upon which there is need of Foreign Missions, and the great responsibility which lies upon us. He then gave a brief account of the Foreign Mission work of our Church, beginning with our first Missionary, Dr. Geddie, and tracing its progress down to the present day.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Scott for his excellent address, after which the meeting closed with the Doxology.
