OF THE NILE. We extract the following from the third volume of that deeply interesting and truly national work, Sir Harris Nicolas's Despatches and Letters of Lord Nelson, just published:—
John Bull.

No present sent to Nelson after the Battle of the Nile was 80 extraordinary as that which he received from his gallant friend, Captain Hallowell of the Swiftsure; and the idea could have occurred only to a very original mind. After L'Orient blew up, part of her mainmast was taken aboard of the Swift-sure; and in May 1799, Captain Hallowell, fearing the effect of all the praise and flattery lavished on his chief, determined to remind him that he was mortal. He therefore ordered a coffin to be made out of part of L'Orient's mast, and was so careful that nothing whatever should be used in its construc-tion that was not taken from it, that the staples were formed of the spikes drawn from the cheeks of the mast, which were driven into the edge of the coffin, and when the lid was put on, toggles were put into the staples to keep in down, so as to prevent the necessity of using nails or screws for that purpose. —
The nails in the coffin were likewise made from the spikes taken from the mast. A paper was posted on the bottom, containing the following certificate:—"I do hereby certify that every part of this coffin is made of the wood and iron of

It is greatly to be regretted that Nelson's reply has not been found.

INQUEST IN THE CASE OF O'ROURKE'S MUNDER .- The Coroner's Jury, after consultation, found that the deceased A SINGULAR PRESENT TO LORD NELSON AFTER THE BATTLE
Samuel O'Rourke came to his death by a gun-shot and other wounds, inflicted by one John Brady with intent to murder, and that the said John Brady is guilty of the wilful murder of the deceased Samuel O'Rourke.

The prisoner was subsequently conveyed to Montreal, and It may be observed, in the evidence before the Jury, on the Coroner's Inquest, that both John Brady and his wife were closely questioned about Brady's clothes. This was in consequence of his appearing to have no other than those he had on, with the exception of a pair of trowsers and a shirt which his wife had been seen washing subsequent to the murder. The search on Brady's farm has been most anxiously continued, and still goes on with indefatigable carnestness and perseve rance, for further circumstantial evidence, and not without found hidden near the house, and O'Rourke's gold watch under a log. Brady's wife was allowed to go home last night, while he himself was fully committed to take his trial, and sent off to gaol in charge of three armed militia-men, and would arrive render refused, on the ground that his offences were political. in town this morning. We understand that Brady's wife is fully committed as an accessory after the fact, in the murder of O'Rourke, and was ter, which is taken from the original, in the Nelson Papers, a lodged in Montreal gaol yesterday morning. She is, we are told, in a state of almost total insensibility from fits. The dog son, not contented with destroying its simplicity, altered the address to "Sir," and changed the date to "August 1798," to make it appear that the coffin was sent immediately after the battle of the Nil.

A verdict of wilful murder has been returned by the Coroner's Jury against Oliver Burns, Hugh Craig, David Foley, William Coxford, John Quigley, John Maguire, and William Murray, all of Bytown, for killing Mr. Kennedy Barns in the streets of Bytown, in broad day-light, by pelting him with stones. By the account given in the Ottawa Advocate these murderous assaults seem to be quite common in that locality. it high time that the inhabitants should establish a police force.

Lord Nelson highly appreciated the present, and for some time had it placed upright, with the lid on, against the bulk-head of his cabin, behind the chair on which he sat at dinner. At length, by the entreaties of an old servant, he was prevailed on to allow it to be carried below. When his Lordship left the Vanguard, the coffin was removed into the Foudrogrant, where it remained for many days on the grating of the quarter-deck.

While his officers were one day looking at it, he came out of the cabin:—"You may look at it, gentlemen," said he, "as long as you please; but depend on it, none of you shall have long as you please; but depend on it, none of you shall have it. The Newbrunswicker further enlightens us by a statement that the continuation of the line from St. John to Halifax is to be by way of Windsor and Annapolis-impracticable, we fear, in both instances, owing to the impossibility of proceeding to St. John from these places in mid winter. There are, however, other parts of the Bay shore in Nova Scotia from which a regular communication with St. John could be kept up by means of steamboats, throughout the most inclement season. But we cannot think that this would be the route—the probatreal the next morning, having previously reviewed the techment stationed here; he likewise inspected the Military Fundy to Fredericton, a branch from either place might consider the first term of the man all their regardless than the first term of the morning that the morn Works here, with which he expressed himself satisfied.—Ottawa nect the main line with St. John, which would thus reap all the advantages of a direct communication with Canada, though the communication with Halifax, with the advantages of its harbour, open at all seasons, and the facility of approaching it, ompared with the dangerous navigation of the Bay of Fundy,

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR IN THE WEST .- His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor has been on a tour to the westward during the past fortnight, and has visited Windsor, Lunenburg, Liverpool, Shelburne, and Yarmouth. It does not appear that at the three first mentioned places any particular mony was observed; but on arriving at Shelburne His Excellency was presented with an Address, with the sentiments of which the Great Liberals are in no small degree dissatisfied, and with little wonder, for it goes far to contradict their rather frequent assertions of late, of the triumph of their principles. The Address purports to have received the signatures of the clergy, sheriff, magistrates, and other inhabitants of Shelburne; and if the sentiments therein propounded prevail in the county, and we doubt it not, the Great Liberal tenure of its representation is very insecure, and the ensuing election will show a state of things very different to that which now exists. We have ever been led to believe that the Conservatives were stronger than the Liberals in Shelburne, and that it was more owing to their apathy than any other cause that they did not make their influence felt in the Assembly. We may hope that they will no longer sit with folded hands-that the period of apathy has passed away-that the sentiments contained in the Address will be manfully upheld—and that men will be found amongst them who will give effect to their principles in the egislature.

His Excellency proceeded from Shelburne to Yarmouth, where he also met with a most gracious reception, indicative, we have reason to believe, of a growth of Conservative feelings-Who would have thought that in a county represented in the Assembly by Huntington, and in the Lower Council by Hon-Staley Brown, an address so significant in what it does not say, of the equal strength of parties, would have welcomed his Lordship to Yarmouth. From that quarter of all others, some expression of opinion in favour of the Ex Councillors, or again the policy of his Lordship's administration, might have been expected. As it is, however, the people of Yarmouth, have acted wisely and well. But there is something dreadfully significant if not ominous, in the triumphal arch surmoun a crown of dahlias—erected to do honour to his Lordship Huntington and Staley Brown assisting at the triumph. - Ib.

But there is a deep and impressive moral to be drawn from this transaction. Why was such a person taken np and pat-ronized by American politiciaus? Why was such a man en-trusted with an office? It is useless to talk of "foreigners," when the lowest of them, coming to this country under such circumstances, are put into places of public trust and benefit. It is notorious that he fled from Canada charged with murder, arson and mail robbery, as above stated, and that the proofs of his guilt were sent after him; yet, instead of being sent back from whence he came, to suffer the penalty of the law, he is fewarded with a public office. We say it is unfair to reproach foreigners with the misdeeds of Mackenzie, when such rewards are held out to men of his class.

To the act of publishing private and confidential letters, ob-ained, too, by fraudulent means, we have nothing to say, but to reiterate the unqualified condemnation of such baseness, which has just burst forth from the whole community.—New
