When the tussling between girls and men commenced, a third man, the one who earlier asked after Mr. Quirk, entered from the hall and jumped for the money. Miss Robertson broke free almost immediately from the biggest man, and jumped for the telephone. He brushed her aside, and with the butt-end of his revolver knocked off the mouthpiece. He grabbed the girl and proceeded to choke her. Yet again she broke away, and was fired at as she passed out the front door. Miss Hilstrop was severely choked while fighting on the floor with the short, thick-set man. Eventually he let her up and held her at hay with the revolvers.

The whole thing occurred in a few minutes. When the shipper and traveler came, in response to the cries of the girls, the third man, who had not taken part in any of the scrambling, had finished raking the envelopes into his little club bag. "All right, boys," he said, and also drew a revolver and covered the two men and the one remaining girl. THE F. W. MATTHEWS CO. Funeral Directors
