

TORONTO UNIVERSITY

THE educational establishments of Toronto are the glory and pride of her citizens. In these institutions, both public and private she stands unsurpassed, and if compared with other cities of similar age and population she has no rival. In connection with higher education she has Toronto University, Trinity, Knox, Wycliffe, Baptist and Upper Canada Colleges, all of which have high reputations as seats of learning. There are numerous handsome common and grammar schools, and many first class private day and boarding schools, some of which are well known throughout the entire Dominion, and also in the United States.

The University Buildings are situated in University Park (adjoining Queens Park), and are one of the noblest piles of architecture on the American continent, and as a seat of learning, second to none on this side of the Atlantic. The buildings, in their principal features, are in the Norman style of architecture, with massive tower and richly sculptured doorway for the main entrance. The chief facades are to the south and east—the former of great and massive elevation, for distant effect from the lake and city, the latter of more broken and picturesque outline for combination, with the beautiful ravine lying between it and the main park avenue, from which it will be chiefly viewed. The general outline of the building approaches the form of a square, having an internal quadrangle of about 200 feet square, the north side of which is left open to University Park. The main frontage on the south is about 300 feet long, with massive Norman tower in the centre, 120 feet in height, and comprising two storeys, that on the ground being devoted to lecture rooms, the upper storey to the library and museum. The east side of the building is 260 feet in length, and entered by a subsidiary tower. The west end of the quadrangle is about 200 feet in length, and used as residences for students. The whole cost was $500,000. University Park originally consisted of 104 acres, but in 1859 fifty acres were granted towards forming Queen's Park, and the rest retained for the University, which are well laid out. Within the grounds are the buildings of the Magnetical Observatory.
