

dition of the place she holds in the Empire, and the obligations which that recognition brings, there must flourish the national sentiment, with the consequent desire for the advancement of national interests—as distinct from State interests—to the material profit of the Commonwealth as a whole.