Clancy on Whitney.

The first two toasts to the King and Canada were proposed by the chairman in excellent addresses that were models of patriotism and brevity. James Clancy, M.P., responded to the latter toast. He spoke appropriately, and then in a happy reminiscent strain, referred to his relations with Mr. Whitaep, the able leader of the Conservative party in Ontario, whose gallant fight none of them could do aught but admire. [Cheers.] He was a man who deserved their respect and confidence, and if he wanted any encouragement he had only to come to London. [Cheers.]
