A SLIGHT FIRE

In the Residence of D. J. Purdy This Morning.

A fire, which is thought to have started from the furnace, was discovered in D. J. Purdy's house, Main St., this morning. Mrs. Purdy smelt smoke in the dining room, and thinking there was a fire in the house called for her son, who was down stairs waiting in the store.

He immediately went up stairs and found that the fire was confined between the walls of the dining room and the kitchen. An alarm was rung, and 125 brought the north end firemen to the scene, and in a short time two streams of water were being poured upon the fire.

Most of the furniture in the rooms were removed, and very little damage was done.

The water soaked through the floor and came down into the shop causing some destruction to the goods.

Mr. Purdy is at present in Halifax.

OUR FRUIT IN ENGLAND.

Apple Exports Increasing But Price Is Low-- Nova Scotia Sanitarium--General News.

Kings County, N. S., Jan. 18--The death of Elizabeth Chute, wife of S. Chute, of Berwick took place at her husband's residence this morning. Mrs. Chute had been for some weeks ill at her mother's residence in Kentville, but had recovered sufficiently to return to her home, and on last Friday was driving about Berwick apparently in good health. On Monday she appeared quite ill, and Dr. Stewart of Halifax, and Dr. Webster of Kentville were summoned. They pronounced her disease rheumatic fever, and thought there was every prospect of recovery, but on Wednesday morning she came. She was twenty-four years of age. Much sympathy is added to the bereaved husband, a son to the mother, Mrs. Margeson, whose husband and only child have passed away within three weeks. Mrs. Parker was a student at St. Allison and had many friends in the maritime provinces.

Whether because the Kings county men have announced their intention to look into the apple export business, or whether the English fruit is becoming exhausted, "let doctors tell," but the English brokers are certainly sending more encouraging reports of the market, and the hope of the shippers are correspondingly going up. Fourteen thousand barrels of the shippers are correspondingly going up. Fourteen thousand barrels of the shippers are correspondingly going up. Fourteen thousand barrels of the shippers are correspondingly going up.

The appointment of Chief Justice Weatherbe has caused much satisfaction in Kings county where the gentleman is well and favorably known. His residence, St. Eulalie, is situated near historic Grand Pre, and is a beautiful spot. Here the justice with his family resides the greater part of the year, and Judge Weatherbe devote his summers to horticultural work in which he is greatly interested. He has had set out about nine thousand fruit trees, which a few years will be in bearing, and his judicial mind carefully weighs the pros and cons of any improved method which comes to his notice before he proceeds to make use of them.

The Provincial Sanitarium at Kentville is proving a most popular resort for those affected with the dread white plague and a large number of the patients have gone away if not completely cured, at least greatly benefited by the treatment. The rooms are all taken at present and when one views the sick ones wrapped in furs, seated on the piazzas, which every breath of air with which we have been lately favored, can get at them, one feels as if every germ of disease might be frozen, and wonders how the invalids themselves keep warm. They seem to manage it though, and a few weeks of the treatment often changes the emaciated one into a healthy looking individual. The government has sent it to lower the price of board, and the sanitarium is proving a success in every way.

James W. MacQuinn, a native of Burton, Sunbury county, died in Bangor, Me., on the 17th inst. of his age. He was formerly a prominent lumberman. He was compelled to retire from active work some years ago, owing to failing health. Besides his wife he leaves two daughters and a son, now residing with her daughter, Mrs. James T. Carpenter, Paradise Row.

MARVELLOUS WORK

Done by Pauline the Mind Reader at the York Last Night.

Pauline's, greatest of all mind-reading tests, the mock murder trial was given last night at the York Theatre by the great hypnotist. While Pauline has surprised his audiences with his wonderful work during the first two nights of his engagement that of last evening astonished them beyond all expectations. The mock murder trial was the masterpiece of the renowned hypnotist Bishop, who whilst in the act of performing it dropped dead upon the stage. Pauline goes a step farther than Bishop in that after finding the murdered man, the murderer, the weapon and the book in which the sentence is written, he also produces the sentence upon a black board. This latter the great Bishop did not undertake.

Any who missed seeing this wonderful test of Pauline's last evening missed one of the best things in that line ever offered a St. John audience. After getting a committee of well known citizens upon the stage Pauline selected one to go to the audience and take a gentleman out of the building and hide him. This was the supposed murdered man. Another member of the committee was asked to go to the audience and hide away the supposed murderer. Another was asked to get a weapon, supposed to be the weapon with which the deed was committed, and hide it also. Then the fourth member of the committee, who acted as judge, took the audience and take a gentleman out of the building and hide him. This was the supposed murdered man. Another member of the committee was asked to go to the audience and hide away the supposed murderer. Another was asked to get a weapon, supposed to be the weapon with which the deed was committed, and hide it also.

Immediately upon the stage Pauline wrote in the sentence of the court, and hid it away also. The murderer he started after the murdered man, the murderer, the weapon and the book. Rushing down through the audience and out of the building the great hypnotist was not long in bringing back the supposed murdered man, whom he found down in Manager Armstrong's private office. The murderer he started after the murdered man, the murderer, the weapon and the book. Rushing down through the audience and out of the building the great hypnotist was not long in bringing back the supposed murdered man, whom he found down in Manager Armstrong's private office.

Returning to the stage Pauline wrote in the sentence of the court, and hid it away also. The murderer he started after the murdered man, the murderer, the weapon and the book. Rushing down through the audience and out of the building the great hypnotist was not long in bringing back the supposed murdered man, whom he found down in Manager Armstrong's private office.

The great hypnotist's pulse on the conclusion of this test indicated 108 a fact almost beyond comprehension. Members of last night's committee were by the hand and stated that his work was the most wonderful and interesting they had ever witnessed.
