"Bardelys the Magnificent" Proves Sumptuous Picture Production

In "Bardelys the Magnificent," King Vidor's picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which opened at the Imperial Theatre to packed houses both after-

The good-looking star swims raging rivers on horseback, engages in fierce encounters with hordes of strenuous and determined enemies, pole vaults over a line of charging spearsmen and scales walls of dizzying height.

The love scenes of the picture are convincing and moving and of course the picturesque setting of the story, its medieval background, with the exotic costumes and flamboyant conventions only enhance this phase of the production.

Eleanor Boardman as the heroine is thoroughly acceptable, looking every bit the kind of a girl for such a heart-winner as Bardelys.

Gilbert's acting is of the smooth, restrained sort that makes the spectators feel that they are witnessing the intimate development of a genuine romance.

SUPPORTING CAST

ROSSLEYS HELD Strong Cast in James Oliver Cur-THREE MORE DAYS

Owing to their great popularity and because of numerous requests, the clossley Kiddies are being held over three days extra this week, presenting heir popular eighth annual revue, The Rossley Box of Toys," with a aerry Christmas theme of the Fairy Queen bringing to life a box of toy poldiers, sailors, and dolls of every nationality, each doing a specialty dance.

moon and evening yesterday, John Gilbert has a role that will be an everlasting delight to his constantly increasing number of admirers. If Rafael Sabatini, the author of "Bardelys the Magnificent," had personally chosen the hero for the picturisation of his stirring romance, he could not have made a happier selection. ter known as a Song and Dance Man; the stage life of Broadway with Bessie Love, the screen's Charleston champion. A brilliant supporting cast surrounds the star, including Roy D'Arcy as the cruel and treacherous Chatellerault, the villain of the opus; Karl Dane, as the ludicrous Rodenard. Bardely's attendant, and Aurthur Lubin, George K. Arthur, John T. Mürray, Lionel Belmore and others.

As usual the Imperial's musical department rose to the occasion handsomely. The orchestra under Mr. Jones and the organ in the capable hands of Mr. Ewing purveyed programmes of incidentals and complete classical and semi-classical numbers that fitted into the spirit of the fiction charmingly.

Sights are real. Only the story is fictitious, and the natives say things a great deal worse happened in the good old days." Chancy plays the part of a man so embittered by a circumstance of fate that makes him a permanent cripple for life that he becomes a desperate criminal waging war against the entire community. A two-act comedy and talking picture, vaudeville, Frawley and Smith, comedians, round out an excellent bill.
