GOT HIS TIP FROM A NEGRO'S CART

Doheny, Figure in Oil Case, Quick to Take Advantage.

Edward L. Doheny, the oil magnate, who is a central figure in the revelations at Washington, in which American public men are being smirched right and left, says bystander in the Toronto Globe, has as private motto which says: "Never look back." This helped him materially to the position of head of a great combination of oil and subsidiary corporations in Mexico, California and Louisiana, with aggregate capital of $171,000,000. Then he expanded his motto to read: "Never look back." Neither take credit to yourself for looking forward. Your head is screwed on that way, so you can't help being forward-looking. What the world needs is not forward-looking but forward-seeing men.

the discoverer of the great oil deposits in both regions. Doheny had an uncanny sense for the discovery of mineral deposits. In 1872, at the age of 16, he left his native place of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, after graduating from the high school, and joined a geological survey party in New Mexico, but he soon quit the Government service and went searching for a gold mine. For nearly 20 years he went up and down the country in his quest, and in 1892 reached the Pacific Coast with about $10,000 and a lot of knowledge of geology, chemistry and metallurgy.

One day in Los Angeles he saw a negro hauling a load of black tarry stuff which the negro called "brea," saying it was used for fuel. Doheny knew that brea was exuded from oil, so his interest leaped, and he leased a vacant lot next to where the negro had loaded his wagon. He bored 150 feet and struck oil in small quantities. This was the beginning, with much more to follow, and the great ventures in the uncharted interior of Mexico made one of the most romantic successes in the history of oil.

Doheny's father came from Ireland, lingering for some years at St. John's Newfoundland, in the Arctic seal fishing, and reaching Wisconsin in 1852. The oil king has ever cherished strong affection for Ireland, and gave large financial aid for the Home Rule fight, being in favor of an Irish republic.

Oak Hall Buyers Return From Spring Trip
The buyer for the Oak Hall Women's Shop recently returned from an extensive buying trip including New York, Toronto, Montreal and is tremendously enthusiastic about the new spring styles in suits, coats and dresses. She was particularly impressed with the numerous suits that were showing and says that suits are certainly coming into their own once more. Her delightful purchases are arriving daily and the Oak Hall Women's Shop is quickly swinging into a festival of new spring styles.

Another Oak Hall buyer just returned is the manager of the Bargain Basement. He spent several days at the big merchandise fair in New York and will soon have many new novelties on his counter. His trip included Boston, New York, Detroit, Hamilton, Toronto and Montreal. From these large centres he procured such merchandise as will make a new and bigger name for the Oak Hall Bargain Basement. Some of these lines are already in a trip to the Bargain Basement tomorrow will be well worth while.

SONGS.
(Winfred Lockhart Willis in New York Herald.)
I have sung many songs,
Of stars and shadows and rain,
Of dawn on the sea and twilight,
Of grief and sorrow and pain.
And I have heard many songs,
Too lovely for words thereof,
Delicate chords of music,
Touched by the hand of love.
But, though my heart is aching
With the song that it longs to sing,
It carries its love in silence
And hides it, a secret thing.
And the words that my lips are framing
Vanish and will not come;
Though I sing of the dawn and the twilight,
The voice of my love is dumb.
Heart, you have sung so bitterly
Of lights and shadows and seas—
Oh, give me a song to my lover!
You have wasted yourself on these.

Watch Out!
Turn a wheel a million times on stale, hard oil — and what happens? A worn out axle.
The works of your watch whirl far more than that on oil years old; dust gets in to clog and grind the delicate gears. Watch out for your watch. Have it run right a lifetime. Watch and jewelry repairs also available at
