

THE RETURNED MAN AND HIS MONEY.

(Toronto Saturday Night.)
Returned Man, St. Catharines.—The returned soldier, released from the customary discipline, and with more money in his pockets than he ever had at one time before, is apt to be a most ungrudging "investor." I suppose the returned soldier will pick up anything, so long as it has enough shine on it. Your idea of selecting two new and, as I imagine, ultra-speculative companies, and "playing safe" by purchasing into both, instead of one only, has not much merit to it. I think the Dominion government might very well bring out a new issue of bonds, being twenty-year securities, issued at par, and bearing interest at five and one-half per cent, to be sold only to returned men at that price. Get your money into bonds. Government bonds, municipal bonds, corporation bonds is how they run in point of safety. If you are too stubborn to buy bonds, select preference stocks now paying a dividend, and which are listed. If you think preference stocks are above your head and desire to lay the foundations Down in Knoxville, Tenn., lives Miss Isabell Millon, who has created a new and distinct art. To be brief, she has developed dried apple sculpture with remarkable results, says the Scientific American.

For years Miss Millon has been interested in the various types of mountaineers who came down to her father's store to trade. Having artistic ability, she tried a good many times to model their quaint and weather-beaten faces by the conventional methods of sculpture, but the results did not satisfy her. One evening, while cutting apples to dry them for the future, she picked up a piece of partially dried apple and noted its striking resemblance to the wrinkled face of the usual elderly mountaineer, whom she had endeavored to portray.

Taking up a sharp knife she did a little cutting so as to fashion the wrinkled apple into a human face. The outcome was most successful; she saw possibilities in this newly discovered art, and she set to work experimenting in dried apple sculpture. Little by little she became quite expert in making dolls whose heads are simply dried apples cleverly cut before they are dried.
Miss Millon has found a satisfactory preservative with which she varnishes the dried apple heads when they have reached the desired state of dryness. The costumes and accessories are carefully copied from life; indeed, Miss Millon always has some particular person in mind when she evolves a little doll with a dried apple face.

A Hot Spot Chalmers Knows Neither Altitude Nor Weather

ANYONE who has motored much knows how a change of altitude—even of 600 feet—affects the average car. And when the weather changes, even if you never leave your home town, what a terrible affair it is to get your motor "running right."

A Hot Spot Chalmers knows neither altitude nor weather. For the Hot Spot device is proof against both.

No matter what the day, no matter where you are on the map, the Hot Spot carburizes the gas into a "dry" vapor from which all the power is wrung with amazing ease.

It is throbless, frictionless power, and on a cold day the engine runs warm in an instant or on a hot day runs cold consistently.

For "pulverizing" gas nothing yet has equalled the Chalmers Hot Spot and for racing it into the cylinders (a trick that is highly important), nothing has ever been made to approach the Ram's-Horn.

Either one of these two magnificent devices are worth an hour of any man's time. Both of them provide you a mental feast on modern engineering that you'll long remember.

Come see them. They've made the Chalmers one of the few great cars of the world.
