STRANGE TALES ARE NEW LAMP BURNS

Beats Electric or Gas

The Indians Speak of Hot Springs and Weird, Huge Animals.

Nenana, Alaska, May 16.—(Associated Press By Mail).—The unknown Arctic region between the Colville and Porcupine rivers, where Dr. Philip S. Smith has led a party of the United States Geological Survey on a perilous mission of exploration, is the locale of strange tales, spread among fur traders and gold hunters by the native Eskimsos and Indigass.

The territory which the Smith party has gone to investigate and chart appears on the maps largely as a blank space. Certain rivers, like the Colville, never have been traced to their headwarters, and what in the way of topography and resources lies within an area of 35,000 square miles has been a matter of conjecture.

Reports have trickled out of the Polar Basin that great lakes of oil were to be found in this wilderness. But the Eskimsos and Indians tell stranger stories. They say the land is haunted by weird beasts, some of such immense stature that they leave tracks as large as dinner plates. It is said that no Indian can be persuaded to penetrate the region, even though tempted by the promise of abundant fur. The lore has it that there are great areas of hot springs, where the snow never falls and the streams never freeze.

Some of the more credulous of the white men, linking the tales with their terms and so the presuded to the white men, linking the tales with their terms and so the presuded to the white men, linking the tales with their terms and so the control of the white men, linking the tales with their terms and so rectrictly, as been better than gas or electricity, has been a masingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been a masingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been a masingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and Bieading universities and found to be uperior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke of noise—no pumping up, is simp

Some of the more credulous of the white men, linking the tales with their scientific reading, contend that there still may lurk in the far north remnants of the mastadon herds that have left their bones and ivory in almost every stream bordering the lower Yukon river.

PROHIBITION ON TRIAL IN FINNISH LEGISLATURE

Helsingfors, June 14.—Several members of the Finnish Diet have jointly introduced a bill which, if adopted, would drastically revise the prohibition law hich is alleged to have failed entirely in its purpose. It is probable that the bill will be rejected, however, as the principle of prohibition is still officially adhered to by most of the political parties in spite of the measure's alleged disadvantages.
