Coxeyites Show Fight.

BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—Sheriff Taggart's posse of twenty-six, with the assistance of fifteen policemen, set to flight Count Rybadowski's army of 250 hoboes this afternoon after a pitched battle, in which twenty-five of the hoboes and two deputy sheriffs were injured. Nine hoboes were so badly hurt that it was necessary to take them to the hospital. The Count and 150 of his followers had been placed under arrest. The Count being held for assault in the second degree, for which he can receive five years' imprisonment.

A score of others had their heads cut open by policemen's clubs and were treated on the spot by the ambulance physicians, their wounds not being serious. The Count himself was badly cut over the eye by the fist of a deputy sheriff. The battle occupied about five hours, and Sheriff Taggart had notified the Count to move on as the three days allowed him had expired. The Count sent back word that he would split on Sheriff Taggart's notice and remain as long as he pleased. Sheriff Taggart swore in twenty-five deputies, put himself at their head, and set out to disperse the army. He arrived at the camp and placed the Count and his lieutenants under arrest and started with them for a justice court half a mile away, where they were to be tried. The army, numbering 250 men, fell in behind the sheriff. When they arrived at the Court House the Count was permitted to speak to some of his followers. He addressed them in Polish, and before the Sheriff could interfere the crowd had closed in around the Count, and the British warship Curacao and German warship Buzard bombarded Lunenburg, which, however, the rebels had burned and evacuated during the night, retreating to Salafata. War vessels and loyal troops followed them, reaching there that evening. Salafata was found deserted and the population of rebels remained undiscovered owing to darkness. At dawn the troops encountered the enemy and a battle ensued, the former losing two killed and one wounded. The enemy's loss is unknown. Later the men-of-war opened fire on rebels who were scattered in the bushes. The warships continued firing until late in the afternoon, when a letter was sent aboard from the rebels offering to surrender. Malitosa, who was on the Curacao, was consulted. He met the delegates and peace was arranged, the rebels giving up one hundred rifles to the king and promising to cease hostilities. The government troops lost six men during the fighting while the loss of life on the part of the rebels although unknown is believed to have been heavy. The news here by this morning that there had been further fighting between rebels and government troops. The former having been joined by a detachment of about hundred strong under Tamassese and that the rebels are now determined to fight to a finish."
