EVA.

Felix had not inherited his father's incapacity for making money, so the twenty years that had passed since Thomas had been abroad he had built up a fortune, which he could not induce his father to share, but which that father was perfectly willing to see devoted to their mutual revenge. There was meaning, therefore, in the injunction Felix gave his brother on his departure for Montenegro: "I have money; spend it; spend what you will, and when your task is completed, there will still be some left for your amusement."
Thomas bowed. "The laborer is worthy of his hire," he thought. "And you?" he asked, looking about the stately walls, which seemed to have lost their very excuse for being. But that his father had died. "Will you remain here?"
Felix's answer was abrupt, but positive. "No; I go to New York tomorrow. I have rented a house there, which you may one day wish to share. The name under which I have leased it is Adams, Felix Adams. As such you will address me. Cadwalader is a name that must not leave your lips in Montenegro, nor must you forget that my person is known here, otherwise we might not have been dependent on you for the success of our revenge." And he smiled, full and conscious of being the handsomer man of the two. "And now how about those instructions we enjoined you to bring from Paris?"

on me, but on the grave beside which I stood, I moved aside into the shadow of some bushes and watched her while she strewed those flowers—emblems of innocence—over the grave I had just left.
What did it mean, and who was this young girl who honored with such gracious memorials the grave of my long-buried sister? As she rose from her task I could no longer restrain either my emotion or the curiosity with which her act had inspired me. Advancing, I greeted her with all the respect her appearance called for, and noting that her face was even more beautiful when lifted in speech than when bent in gravity over her flowers. I asked her, in the indifferent tone of a stranger, who was buried in this spot, and why she, a mere girl, dropped flowers upon a grave the mosses of whose stone proved it to have been dug long before she was born.
Her answer caused me a shock, full as my life has lately been of startling experiences. "I strew flowers here," said she, "because the girl who lies buried under this stone had the same birthday as myself. I never saw her, it's true, but she died in my father's house when she was no older than I am today, and since I have become a stranger, I realize what loss there is in dying young. I have made it a custom to share with her my birthday flowers, and I have made it a custom to appear and character, and so I bring her lilacs."
Dear Felix: I have touched the hand of John Polndexter. In order to win a place in the good graces of the daughter I must please the father, or at least attract his favorable notice. I have reason to think I have done this.

LETTER II.

I have touched the hand of John Polndexter. In order to win a place in the good graces of the daughter I must please the father, or at least attract his favorable notice. I have reason to think I have done this.
Very truly,
THOMAS.

LETTER IV.

I have touched the hand of John Polndexter. In order to win a place in the good graces of the daughter I must please the father, or at least attract his favorable notice. I have reason to think I have done this.
Very truly,
THOMAS.

Today I went twenty-five miles on horseback to procure her a trifle she fancied.
Yours aff.,
THOMAS.

ENTRY IV.
All will not go as easily as Felix imagines. Eva Polndexter may be a country girl, but she has her standards, too, and more, grace and refinement are not sufficient to win her. Have I the other qualities she demands? That remains to be seen. I have one she never dreams of. Will its shadow so overweigh the rest that her naturally pure spirit will shrink from me just at the moment when I think her mine? I cannot tell, and the doubt creates a hell within me. Something deeper, stronger, more imperious than my revenge makes the winning of this girl's heart a necessity to me. I have forgotten everything except that she is the one woman of my life, and that I can never rest till her heart is wholly mine. Good God! Have I become a slave where I hoped to be master? Have I, Thomas Cadwalader, given my soul into the keeping of this innocent girl? I do not even stop to inquire. To win her—that is all for which I now live.

LETTER V.

Dear Felix: She may not care for me, but she is interested in one of our. Of this I am assured by John Polndexter, who seems very desirous of aiding me in my attempt to win his daughter's heart. Hard work, close bond, I will ever come to love me. I will with the force of a very strong nature. The pale blonde has a heart.

ENTRY V.

If it were possible only that I feel, I might have some hope of restraining it. But it is something more, something deeper, something which constrains me to look with her eyes, hear with her ears, and think with her heart. My soul, rather than my body, is enthralled. I want to win her, not for my own satisfaction, but to make her happy. I want to win her, not for my own satisfaction, but to make her happy.

LETTER VI.

Dear Felix:—Will you send me a few exquisite articles from Tiffany's? I see that her father expects me to give her presents. I think she will accept them. If she does, we may both rest easy as to the state of her affections.

PRINCE GEORGE ANGRY OVER RECENT REPORTS

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Telegraph forwards which purports to be an account of the origin of the official denials of the present condition of George, Crown Prince of Serbia. When Prince George heard the newspaper reports of his sanity he rushed with his riding whip to the foreign office and burst into the room of Premier Pallas, shouting, "You dog, you intend to confine me, you master? I'll kill you, I'll trample upon you, you canaille!"

The premier had much trouble in calming the prince, who then proceeded to the press bureau where Director Ivanitch, under the orders of the prince, composed the official denials in his presence. When this had been done George departed, flourishing his whip and crying, "These Swabian and Hungarian dogs shall eat their words."

Similar scenes were enacted at the palace where, the correspondent says, the prince ill-treated his brother, Prince Alexander, who is a quiet youth.

COLOGNE, Nov. 20.—In a despatch from Berlin the correspondent of the Cologne Gazette confirms the report, published and discussed in the English press for several days past, that Norway intends to propose that the powers, including Russia, shall guarantee the neutrality of Norwegian territory. The correspondent says that he has learned that Germany is favorably disposed to this idea.

FEELS SURE OF MORE MINERAL WEALTH

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—The Board of Trade has decided to tender a large tract to William MacKenzie and D. D. Mann, of the Canadian Northern Railway Co., at the King Edward Hotel, December 14th, as the Canadian Northern is the first railway company to make its headquarters in Toronto.

Professor Miller, provincial geologist, in charge of the operations on mineralized portions of Gille's Limit, arrived and brings news of discoveries of additional silver veins. They are larger but not so rich as the pioneer discovery. Professor Miller feels assured that there is great mineral wealth in the limit.

WOMAN ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Daughters Objected to Her Occupation and Informed Police—Prisoner Refused Bail

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Mrs. Wilhelm Eckhart, a German midwife, 60 years of age, was arrested at her home on the East Side today and after arraignment, led off without bail on a charge of malpractice. Of two other women occupants of the Eckhart house, one was sent to a hospital and the other taken to the district attorney's office, where she was interrogated.

In asking that the prisoner be refused bail, a representative of the district attorney's office said that the charges against her would probably be changed to infanticide when she was given a hearing on Thursday. A representative of the New York County Medical Society, which is also interested in the case, told the court that his office had evidence that the bodies of twelve infants had been burned in a cookstove at the Eckhart house.

The investigation leading up to today's arrest was instituted after certain reports had been made to the Board of Health, the Medical Society and the district attorney by Mrs. Marie Schock, who was said to be the wife of a merchant, and who had been arrested by the police on charges of infanticide.

According to the authorities these women had protested against their mother's occupation when she had asked them to join her in the business. The sisters reported the matter to the authorities, and later, at the instance of the police, entered into a business arrangement with their mother.

Mrs. Eckhart was held on the technical charge of performing an operation in the case described by Mrs. Schock. A little boy known as Tommy Eckhart, and said to be an adopted son of the prisoner, was questioned at the district attorney's office and later sent to the room of the Gerry Society.

The Eckhart home was guarded by the police tonight and will be searched tomorrow.

Council for Mrs. Eckhart alleges that her arrest is the result of a conspiracy to injure an innocent woman.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF HIGH TARIFF ORGANIZATION

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—The Home Market Club, a New England Republican high tariff organization, held its 18th annual banquet at Hotel Vendome this evening. More than 250 members and guests assembled to dine and hear speeches in support of the principles for which the club stands.

George W. Wells of Southbridge, president of the club, presided, and the speaker of the evening, while the speakers were Lieut. Governor Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, Mass.; Congressman James T. McCarry of Minnesota; James W. Vanclave of St. Louis, president of the National Association of Manufacturers; and Charles Heber Clarke of Philadelphia, of the Manufacturers' Club of that city.

James W. Vanclave was the chief speaker.

GOVERNMENT INSURANCE

60,000,000 Added in Germany in Last Quarter Century

All but Socialists Convinced That Scheme is Beneficial—Sickness, Accident and Old-age Pensions Paid.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—The 25th anniversary of the late Prince Bismarck's announcement in the Reichstag that the Emperor was determined that the State should systematically assist the working people, male or female, by accident, sickness and old-age insurance, was commemorated widely in the German press today. The Socialists, following the policy which they adopted when the laws were passed, found fault with the insurance as being inadequate, and not radical enough really to provide for the "casualties in the industrial warfare and the disabilities of those worn out in the service of capital."

But the whole body of Liberal and Conservative opinion appeared convinced that the laws are beneficial. During the last twenty years $55,750,000 has been paid out for sickness, $22,750,000 for accidents and $15,000,000 for compulsory contributions by employers and employees. In cases of sickness two-thirds of the expenses are paid by the employer and one-third by the employee. In accident cases all the expenses are paid by the employer, and half by the employee, the Government supplementing each pension with $15.50 yearly.

The sum of $112,500 was expended daily on the combined objects, the total of the various funds is $375,000,000, the total amount paid in since the law was passed is $1,657,750,000, and 60,000,000 persons have profited by this legislation.

The official Imperial Gazette this afternoon published a decree on the anniversary of the Imperial decree of Emperor William I. on State Insurance, pointing out the great ideas contained in the message, which not only had unrivaled success in his Majesty's own country, but were spreading beyond the frontiers of Germany, and adding: "Unfortunately the accomplishment of its highest aim has been retarded by the continuous opposition of those thinking themselves entitled to represent the interests of the working classes."

The message concludes with expressing the hope that the insurance laws may guarantee the inner peace of Germany, and announcing that it is the Emperor's will that the legislation shall continue until the task of protecting the poor and weak is accomplished.
