ST. JOHN, N. B., JUNE 19, 1901.

FUTURE OF THE SOUTHERN STATES.

During the year 1900 and the months that have followed, New Orleans has replaced Boston in its position as the second exporting city of the United States. According to the figures furnished by the national bureau of statistics at Washington, the exports from New Orleans in the last fiscal year were $115,383,764, while during the nine months of the fiscal year 1901 they reached $122,234,069, against Boston's total exports for the latter period of $81,173,051. A study of the percentage which each of the principal United States ports handled of the commerce of the country in 1900, compared with preceding years, develops the fact that the southern ports are steadily obtaining possession of more and more of the export trade which formerly was held by New York, Boston and other North Atlantic seaports. Last year New York handled only 47.03 per cent. of the foreign commerce, against 52.6 per cent. in 1890, 51.4 per cent. in 1896 and 48 per cent. in 1897. Boston's imports were 8.50 per cent. of the total imports of the country, as against 11.3 per cent. in 1897, and its exports in 1900 were only 3.7 per cent. of the total, as against 10.3 per cent. in 1896. Philadelphia's percentage of the total foreign commerce of the United States, about 5.30 per cent., has remained almost stationary for the past four years.

The ports south of Philadelphia, however, show great strides in trade development. Baltimore has gained both in imports and exports. Its share of the total foreign commerce of the United States in 1900 was 3.6 per cent., as against 4.8 per cent. in 1895. Newport News shows a rapid growth in its export trade, which last year represented 2.5 per cent. of the country's total exports, against less than 1 per cent. in 1890. The Gulf ports increased their exportations materially last year, Galveston showing a gain of $7,000,000 and New Orleans an expansion of $30,000,000, with an increase of $5,000,000 in imports.

The significance of these figures lies in the fact that the great national resources of the Southern States, one of the most fertile regions in the world, comprising one-fourth of the area of the American Union, are yet in the infancy of their development. At the recent meeting of the Southern Industrial Convention, President Hargrave remarked: "We have everything except adequate population and finance to forge us ahead of the rest of the world." He estimates that five million of additional population and five hundred million dollars of additional capital will be needed within five years for manufacturing, mineral, agricultural and forest development, and for railroad building. The negro question has been the great barrier to the full advancement of the Southern States, but with the coming of the needed immigration and the introduction of the needed capital, Southern thought would be directed to more healthful issues, and, says President Hargrave, "the negro as an issue would sink into relative unimportance." The most hopeful indication of progress which has come from the South for many years is the attention which its leading men are now giving to the means necessary to bring about the full development of its marvellous resources.

AGAINST CANADA.

In a recent issue of the London Canadian Gazette, Mr. John Ennis, passenger traffic manager of the Allan line, was reported to have said that "emigrants of the class that are good for Canada are not influenced by low rates." This statement called out an earnest protest from Mr. J. W. Baynes of Walsall, who, writing to the Canadian Gazette, says:

"I beg to differ from Mr. Ennis. Many a family of the farm laboring class, and also of town-bred grown, are today compelled to remain here owing to the exorbitant rate charged for passage. I myself know a family, the father of which some years ago went to New Brunswick, and was so delighted with that province that it is his one dream to take his family there; but alas, though honest and hard working, it is impossible for him to pay the rates of passage and have a little left to land with. His family consists of five boys and three girls, ranging from one year up to 18 years. I could mention many such families, but if given the opportunity in one of our colonies would do well. Could Mr. Ennis tell me why steamships only charge $14 to go to Sydney, New South Wales, which takes from 42 to 50 days, and the Allan and other lines charge $5 to Canada, which takes eight to ten days?"

THE SITUATION IN YORK.

The liberal party in York is receiving a good deal of advice from outside journals as to its duty in the present circumstances. We do not propose to add to the volume. There are strong reasons for refraining from interference. One is that Dr. McLeod and his supporters have so far managed the York campaign according to their own judgment, on lines of their own involving other questions than party politics. Secondly, it must be admitted that Dr. McLeod ran a surprisingly good election, and that he has since succeeded in vindicating his own courage, persistence, sound judgment, and above all, the sincerity of the moral purpose which he professed from the beginning. If Dr. McLeod and those who have acted with him do not see their way clear to give up what has been accomplished, and to restore the York county seat to the party which appears to have obtained it improperly, and which has been dispossessed, there is no just ground for complaint by the liberal conservative party elsewhere. It is a matter to be settled in York, and if Dr. McLeod's supporters there do not feel equal to the task of carrying on the fight further, it remains to congratulate them on their success so far as they went.

The "saw-off" has been accepted by both parties in this province as a part of the tactics of the campaign. But the strategic saw-off belongs to the strategic protest. Dr. McLeod's protest was not of that kind and was not sawn off.

There remain eight petitions which may be regarded as political. The government has protested Carleton, Charlotte, Queens, and Kings. The opposition has protested Restigouche, Westmorland and the two St. John seats. If petitions are to be traded against each other there is an even bargain without York, not taking account of the fact that the seat of the minister of railways is involved, and that his personal qualification may be at stake. No doubt there is a tired feeling on both sides in respect to political contests. If that weariness causes the eight petitions to be dropped, government supporters cannot say that they have not got their child's quo.

Then why not let Dr. McLeod and his supporters in York take the course that seems consistent with their campaign as carried to the present stage?

NO OCCASION FOR PANIC.

J. Holt Scherling, a statistician, has reached the conclusion that the population of the earth will equal 1,000 persons to the square mile. He does not believe that the world will be able to support more than this population, which allows only three-quarters of an acre for each individual. The question can hardly be called a live issue, because many things may happen to prevent the population of the world multiplying itself by thirty-three in the next three hundred and fifty years. This statistician says that there are now 1,600,000,000 people in the world, and on his basis of computation the population should have been less than 50,000,000 three hundred and fifty years ago. Probably Europe had then more people than that, and certainly Asia had several times that number. Nor is it possible for any statistician to say what extent of land will support a family three or four centuries hence. The late Professor Malthus, whose theories are not now so familiar as they were to a previous generation, feared that population might go on doubling itself every twenty-five years, in which case the population of the world would today have been about 6,000,000,000, and three hundred and fifty years from now would have multiplied some 15,000 times more. Instead of each person having three-quarters of an acre to live on in the year 2250, Malthus would allow him only about four square yards. Since Malthus wrote, say four score years ago, the population of Europe has doubled, but it is possible that there are not twice as many people in the world as there were in the first quarter of the last century.

IGNORANCE OF SCRIPTURE.

The principal of Upper Canada College finds the Toronto youth, even those who have been through the schools, densely ignorant of scripture. By way of illustration, Dr. Parkin says that he is a Sunday school teacher, and that lately he gave two or three hundred boys, including the seventeen year old son of a well known clergyman, a written examination. The clergyman's son was asked to mention anything he knew in Bible history relating to Bethlehem, Cans of Galilee, Joppa, Jericho, Bethany and said a dozen other places. He did not give a single correct answer. The father of this youth was managing a very large Sunday school, and no doubt thought that he was doing good work. Dr. Parkin does not believe the Sunday schools will ever be able to give Bible teaching in the true sense of the word, and maintains that this instruction must be obtained elsewhere. His illustration seems to go too far even for his purpose. The clergyman's son must be an altogether abnormal creation. If he is not deaf he must many times have heard the story of these historic places read in the church and at home, and it is hard to see how he could have banished everything from his mind assuming that he has a mind. Yet while the case should be an extreme one, even in the families of Toronto clergymen, Dr. Parkin's experience generally agrees with that of others who have made tests. The Century Magazine a year ago gave the results of the examination of a class of collectors, who were tested in scripture allusions quoted from Tennyson. It was found that a majority of the students could not see the point of the reference to Jacob wrestling, Lot's wife, Moses and the rock, Ruth gleanings, the prophet fed by ravens, the prophets of Baal and the test by fire, the turning of water into wine, or the angels at the sepulchre. It is the boast of our Bible societies that the Bible is printed in all the languages, and circulated by increased millions every year. There is no doubt that among great scholars and by men of letters the scriptures are studied more than ever they were before. At the same time there is some reason to fear that the average young person in Christian communities is not so familiar with the text and the story of the Bible as his parents were at his age.

The state of the Liverpool timber market is far from satisfactory, a sharp decline being reported in the value of spruce deals, with sales difficult to effect. Says the Charlestown Gazette of Saturday: "Somebody has telegraphed to the St. John, Halifax and Montreal papers, that the mills are openly selling in Charlestown, that there have been no convictions under the Prohibition Act, that the law is believed to be unconstitutional, and that the city council by refusing to allow the police to assist in enforcing the law have 'let the act up.' Not even the recognized organ of the editors in Charlestown would give such a version of the situation here on the spot. There is certainly no open sale, and what ever may be done in secret there are many who desire to obtain a drink who, notwithstanding many places where the stuff is sold, are unable to get it for love or money."

DEATH OF NEIL WARNER.

Old St. John theatre goes with heart with regret that Neil Warner has passed away. He died in New York last week after a long illness. Mr. Warner, whose real name was Lockwood, was born in London 70 years ago. He was a cousin of Ouida, the novelist. With his wife, Belle Chippendale, a daughter of Frederick Chippendale, of the famous old family of players, he played a season in St. John at the Academy of Music, and prior to that at the old Lyceum. Mr. Warner starred in Australia successfully in the standard drama, and made a decided hit in New York city as Othello. He married theatres in Montreal after his last St. John engagement with more or less success. Three years ago he was stricken with apoplexy. He leaves a widow and three daughters.

Prescott of Albert have the contract, and Wm. McGorman is inspector of the work. The public road leading from the village to the wharf site is being repaired this week.

The showery weather during the past few weeks has been most favorable for the grass, and the Shepody marshes give every promise of an excellent yield. SLANDERS BEWARE!

Beware how you speak of a woman's character. Think how many years she has been building it, of the tolls and privations endured, of the wounds received, and that no suspicion for low her actions. The purity of woman, the salvation of the race, the hope of a future greatness and the redemption of man. Without her purity man sinks beneath the wave of despair with not a star to guide his life into a channel of safety. Think, then, before you speak and remember that any bog can root up the fairest flower that ever grew; so the vilest man can ruin the purest character.

THEY DO IT.

People Quit Coffee and get Well on Postum Food Coffee.

A man in Milford, Ind., says he did not quit drinking coffee because he thought it hurt him, but because he found a morning beverage he liked better in Postum Food Coffee, but to his wonder and surprise he found in a few weeks all of the old symptoms of sickness had left him.

He had been greatly troubled with his stomach and heart, also with what is called "water brash," and dull headaches which made him very irritable and quick tempered.

All of these symptoms disappeared, and he discovered, in spite of all his previous theories that coffee was really the cause of his trouble, and the leaving off of coffee and taking on Postum Food Coffee brought about a perfect cure.

He speaks also of Mrs. Josephine Kelly, living at Elkhart, Ind. Says she was afflicted much as he was, but had become more emaciated than he. So she quit drinking coffee and took on Postum Food Coffee. She is now a healthy and robust lady and willing to make affidavit that Postum Food Coffee saved her.

The gentleman from Milford speaks also of Thomas McDonald as having recovered by using Postum. It can be had at all grocers. A good cup of Postum cannot be made unless it is boiled long enough to bring out the flavor and food value, then it is delicious.
