of the crown; epic poet has sung of the sword; the pastoral poet, with his verses full of the redolence of clover tops and a rustle with a silk of the corn, has sung the praises of the plow. I tell you the praises of the needle. From the fig leaf rope prepared in the garden of Eden to the last stitch taken on the garment for the poor the needle has wrought wonders of kindness, generosity and benefaction. It adorned the girdle of the high priest, it fashioned the curtains in the ancient tabernacle, it cushioned the chariots of King Solo-mon, it provided the robes of Queen Elizabeth, and in high places and in low places, by the fire of the pion-eer's back-log and under the flash of the chandelier, everywhere, it has clothed nakedness, it has preached the gospel, it has overcome hosts of penury and want with the warcry of "Stitch, stitch, stitch!" The oper-atives have found a livelihood by it, and through it the mansions of the employee are constructed.

and through it the mansions of the employer are constructed. Amid the greatest triumphs in all ages and lands, I set down the con-quests of the needle. I admit its crimes; I admit its cruelties. It has had more martyrs than the fire; it has punctured the eye; it has pierced the side; it has struck weakness into the lungs; it has sent madness into the start; it has filled the potter's field it has pitched whole armies of the suffering into crime and wretchfield it has pitched whole armies of the suffering into crime and wretch-edness and woe. But now that I am talking of Dorcas and her ministries the suffering into crime and wretch-edness and woe. But now that I am talking of Dorcas and her uninistries to the poor, I shall speak may of the charities of the needle. This woman was a representative of all those who make garments for the destitute, who knit socks for the bare-footed, who prepare bandages for the lacerated, who fix up boxes of clothing for mis-sionaries, who go into the asylums of the suffering and destitute, bear-ing that gospel which is sight for the blind and hearing for the deaf, and which makes the l-me man leap like a hart and brings the dead to life. NOTH TOP HIM. Sydney, C B., July 18.-(Special)-Lieut. teary's stramer Windward will leave here morow for the north. Mrs. Pearw and which makes the 1-me man leap like a hart and brings the dead to life, immortal health bounding in their pulses. What a contrast between the practical benevolence of this woman and a great deal of the charity of this day! This woman did not spead her time idly planning how the poor of the city of Joppa was to be re-lieved; she took her needle and re-lieved them. She was not like those persons who sympathize with imagin-ary sorrows, and go out in the street and laugh at the boy who has upset that charity which makes a rousing ech on the benevolent platform After awhile all these womanly and goes out to kick the beggar from friends of Christ will put down their the step, crying, "Hush your miser-able howling!" Sufferers of the world needle forever. After making gar-ments for others, some one will make a garment for them; the last robe we want not so much theory as practice: not so much tears as dollars; not so ever wear-the robe for the grave. You will have heard the last cry of not so much tears as dollars; not so much kind wishes as loaves of bread; not so much smiles as shoes; not so much "God bless yous!" as jackets and frocks. I will put one earnest Christian man, hard working, against five thousand mere theorists on the pain. You will have witnessed the last orphanage. You will have come in worn out from your last round of mercy. I do not know where you will mercy. I do not know where you will sleep, nor what your epitaph will be, but there will be a lamp burning at, that tomb, and an angel of Cod guarding it, and through all the long night no rude foot will disturb the dust. All through the haunts of wretchedness Asleep in Jesus! Blessed sleep From which none ever wake to weep! fering of the world, who never had the courage, like Dorcas, to take the needle and assault it. I am glad that there is not a page Then one day there will be a sky rendering and a whir of wheels and the flash of a pageant, armies marchof the world's history which is not a record of female benevolence. God ing, chains clanking, banners wav-ing, thunders booming, and that Christian woman will rise from the says to all lands and people, says to all lands and people, come now and hear the widow's mite rat-tle down into the poor box. The Princess of Conti sold all her jewels that she might help the famine stricken. Queen Blanche, the wife of Louis VIII of France, hearing that there were some persons univerly in dust, and she will be suddenly sur-rounded—surrounded by the wander-ers of the street whom she reclaimed, surrounded by the wounded soils to whom she had administered. Daught-er of God, so strangely surrounded, what means this? It means that recold and still; the star which had there were some persons unjustly in-carcerated in the prisons, went out amid the rabble and took a stick and struck the door as a signal that they. ward has come, that the victory is won, that the crown is ready, that that town, wherever here is a sick child and no balm, wherever there the banquet is spread. Further, we see Dorcas the beneto her grave, there were a great many men and women of pomp and pride and position that went out af-ter her, but I am most affected by ter her, but I am most affected by the story of history that on that day there were ten thousand of the poor of France who followed her coffin, weeping and wailing until the air rang again, because when they lost Josephine they lost their last earthly friend. Oh, who would not rather have such obsequies than all the tears that were ever poured in the lachry-mals that have been exhumed from ancient cities? There may be no costly sarcophagus; there may be no mass for the dead; there may be no costly sarcophagus; there may be no elaborate mausoleum, but in the damp cellars of the city and through the lonely huts of the mountain glen there will be mourning, mourning, mourning, because Dorcas is dead. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." I speak to you of Dorcas the resur-rected. Monday night on the trip from Yar-way through the crowd around the mouth to Boston the Dominion Atlantic steamer was struck by lightning. The bolt struck the wooden forctopmast, splin-tering it from the truck to where it joins bolt struck the wooden loretopmast, spin-tering it from the truck to where it joins the inon foremast. The electrical current passed down the foremast and across the athwartships beem into the sea. Had the vessel been constructed of wood the dam-age would have undoubtedly been seri-ous. The shock was feit by every one on board, and there was consternation for a time among the 79 passengers until their fears were allaged by the officers of the vessel. The four sailors on deck watch at the one nearest the foremast had his left arm paralyzed for the dime being. Mr. Jafnes Kennedy, owner of the bar-quentine Culdoon, has accepted $2,500 for his claim aganst the Spanish steamer Santanderino.
