obtained as a private citizen. He is looking well and is able to turn a critical eye upon those who have peicked up the reins of administration.

Mr. Wilson has not only become a private citizen, but it is learned he does not allow others to become forgetful of that fact. Any visitor calling him "Mr. President" is politely reminded that he is now plain Mr. Wilson during the eight years he was in the White House find it extremely difficult to avoid slips of the tongue by which they have addressed him as "Mr. President."

This is not true of Joseph P. Tumulty, former secretary to Mr. Wilson, than whom there is no more ardent and sincere admirer in the world, for he has always addressed Mr. Wilson as "Governor." This dates back to the public service of Woodrow Wilson as Governor of New Yorks Instituted to the public service of Woodrow Wilson as Governor of New Yorks Instituted to turn a critical eye upon those will have reins of administration.

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who was Mr. Wilson's physician when in the White House, has not found it as easy as Mr. Tumulty to call the former president 'Mr. Wilson." Admiral Gray-son has slipped in this respect several imes since Mr. Wilson left the White House, and on such occasions Mr. Wilon, with a pleasing smile, has admon ished him, "Mr. Wilson, if you please; I ceased to be President on March 4." Ex-President Busy Answering Messages n the role of a private bitizen. While not weighted down with the responsi-bilities of office, he nevertheless has found sufficient tasks facing him to ccupy much of his time. Chief among hese is the answering of the huge stacks of letters, telegrams and cable-grams that have come from all parts of the country, and even from foreign countries. These communications come man rom well wishers in every walk of life,

Before leaving the White House Mr. Wilson indicated to some of his closest friends that he wanted to devote the better part of the remainder of his career to work for international peace and a better understanding among nations.

The messages received by Mr. Wilson have been regarded as private and confidential and he has had no thought of making them public. It is learned that they have come from all sorts and conditions of people, from some of the humblest, to those who are known internationally.

The Wilson home at 2340 S street has been a veritable flower bower since March 4. Many floral tributes have been sent to the house from time to find the march of the property in Washington, while others.
