Awards system strongly blasted as executive of OFS meets Auld

The Ontario student awards programme came under heavy fire February 18 when James Auld, minister of colleges and universities, met with the executive of the Ontario Federation of Students.

The OFS had been requesting the meeting since November 18.

Barbara Cameron, chairwoman of the OFS executive, said the OFS had called in October "for immediate action to relieve students suffering under the OSAP room and board allowance of $32 per week".

"Then we called in January for the allowance to be tied to the cost of living," she said. "Since then, the situation has worsened."

"We have had discussions throughout the province about these issues, and students feel very strongly about them."

Auld replied that whereas in Ontario the first $800 of an award is loan and the rest grant, the first $1,400 is loan in every other province.

"Our (programme) is the most generous," he said.

(In fact, the first $150 is grant in British Columbia, and the remainder of the award is half grant, half loan.)

"We're not talking about other provinces," said Cameron. "We're talking about the students' standard of living, and it's very clear that the standard is going down."

"The government has done nothing but decrease the funds available."

Criticized for failing to secure enough funds for the operation of his ministry, Auld replied that the budget of the ministry of colleges and universities (MCU) had increased by 17 per cent this year, "which is considerably more than the percentage increase of any other ministry".

But according to a press release issued by the Ontario confederation of university faculty associations, the budget of the ministry of health "was adjusted to take account of recent salary and wage increases by an amount greater than the total MCU operating budget".

Want some benzyl acetate in your strawberry parfait?

WASHINGTON (CUP/CPS) — Ice cream used to be a good nutritious treat. Today, though, it's likely to be flavoured, coloured and preserved with chemicals of dubious origin.

If vanilla is your favourite, chances are that vanilla extract has been replaced by "piperonal." This is a benzene derivative with a powerful smell that's commonly used by exterminators to control lice.

If you go for strawberry, the common substitute for strawberries is benzyl acetate. It's one ingredient in the cement used to splice motion picture film.

Eggs used to be used to emulsify the batter. No more, today ice cream factories use diethyl glucol, which turns up in anti-freeze and various kinds of paint remover.

These chemicals are naturally cheaper than the real thing, and prolong the shelf life of the ice cream products considerably. But doesn't it make you want to start making ice cream in your own backyard?

If you are an engineer, this chair could be yours.

This is where you could find yourself if you become a Maritime Engineering Officer in today's Canadian Armed Forces. The Master Engineering Control centre of one of our new DDH 280 Destroyers.

No boilers. No stokers. No sweat!

The power within these beautiful ships comes from jet turbine engines. The machinery that heats, cools, ventilates and provides water throughout these ships is the latest.

Maritime Engineering Officers on these ships work with some of the most sophisticated equipment in the world...with expertly trained men who are as proud of their work as they are of their ships.

If you're studying engineering, think about this Officer's job. It's a very special one. It could take you anywhere in the world!
