

Caught Cold By Working In Water.

A Distressing, Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

Mr. Albert MacPhee, Chignecto Mines, N.S., writes:—"In Oct., 1908, I caught cold by working in water, and had a very bad cough and that distressing, tickling sensation in my throat so I could not sleep at night, and my lungs were so very sore I had to give up work. Our doctor gave me medicine but it did me no good so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and by the time I had used two bottles I was entirely cured. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup combines the potent healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Sore Throat, Pain or Tightness in the Chest, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Beware of imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Ask for it and insist on getting what you ask for. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and the price 25 cents.

A school teacher instructed a pupil to purchase a grammar, and received, next day, this note from the child's mother:

"I do not desire for Lulu shall engage in grammar, as I prefer her to engage in useful studies and can learn her how to speak and write properly myself. I have went through two grammars myself and I can't say they did me no good, I prefer her engage in German and drawing and vocal music on the piano."

The Poor Old Horse.

An old and crippled horse am I,
Full twenty years have passed
Since I was bought with price so high,
Because I could trot so fast.

But now I've grown so weak and old,
My owner said, to-day,
"I think the old horse must be sold,
"And in his place we'll use the bay."

'Twas twenty years ago, I say,
When master brought me home,
And mistress stroked my coat of gray,
And from their eyes the kindness shone.

And now my usefulness is o'er,
And beauty, too, I know,
But still I love them as of yore,
And could I speak, would tell them so.

My lot was happy for twenty years,
No hard work night or day,
I had no thought, I had no fears,
Bad luck would come my way.

But, oh, this evening, after dark,
There came a great surprise,
A shadow flitted grim and dark,
Before my dim, old eyes.

My master with indifferent smile,
Mistress with face serene
A bustle about the barn, awhile,
O dear, what can it mean?

Then comes a stranger to my stall,
And roughly lifts my head:
"I'll give scarce anything," he says, "at all."
"For this old horse is nearly dead."

My old eyes ache, my limbs are weak,
I know now what they've done,
They've sold me to a stranger, sleek,
When life for me is almost done.

O, master, why so hard of heart?
And mistress, once so kind,
I love you, and we're doomed to part,
Must I leave you both behind?

My eyes are dim, my heart is sore
From longing for old friends;
I pray my life may soon be o'er,
I wait, in patience till it ends.
—Jennie F. Stoddard, in Our Dumb Animals.

A well-known Virginia clergyman, one-time president of William and Mary College, was married three times, and on each occasion the ceremony was performed by his brother, an even more renowned bishop. When the first marriage took place, the bishop had to refuse a tempting invitation from an old friend because—so the letter ran—"I am going up to Williamsburg on that date to marry my brother George."

The same friend happened to be on the train with him, years afterward, when he was travelling to the second ceremony. "I am going to marry my brother George," the bishop explained benignly, after the business of greetings was over. Again many years passed, and the same journey was taken once more for the same purpose. By a strange coincidence, the identical friend ran into the bishop as they hurried through the depot to their respective trains. "Where going, bishop," the former sang out as they grasped hands and dashed by each other. "I am going where I am always going," the answer came back, ponderously, "to marry my brother George."

WANTED TO MAKE SURE.

A number of students from a German university were drinking in a beer garden. A self-satisfied looking American said to one of the shortest and stoutest Dutchmen:

"Let me see your clothes you can't drink seven schooners of beer!"

The Dutchman hesitated, then declined the bet and got the room. In ten minutes he was back, hurried up to the American and exclaimed:

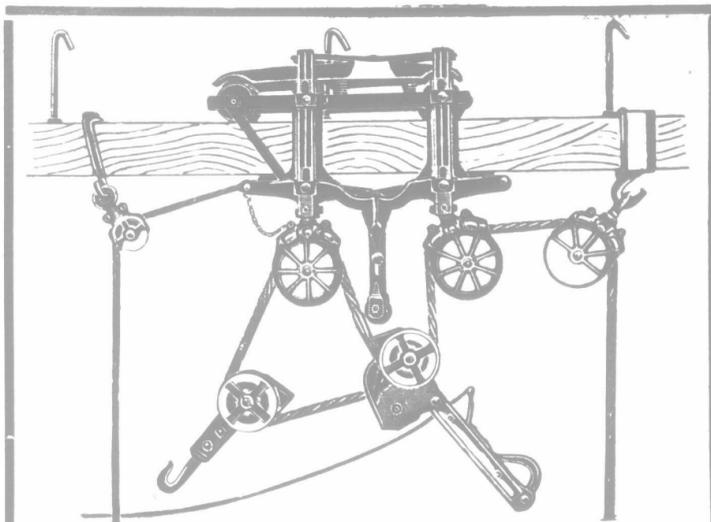

"I will stake my shirt!"

The American, who had not had the first schooner, looked at the Dutchman and exclaimed:

"I will stake my shirt!"

The Dutchman hesitated, then declined the bet and got the room. In ten minutes he was back, hurried up to the American and exclaimed:

"I will stake my shirt!"
