TARGET IN A BROOD SOW.

Have a brood sow just pigged whose udder is badly caked, and consequently very little milk. Have bathed with warm water and rubbed with sweet oil to no benefit.

Ans.—Possibly the feed the sow is getting is the exciting cause. On no account feed her crushed barley during the first six weeks after farrowing. Give her a mild aperient, two table-spoonfuls of Epsom salts, dissolved in new milk, repeat the following day. Continue the local application, preferably lard, and omit the Cathing unless you are careful to dry quickly and she has a warm, dry bed to lie upon.

TREATING SEED WHEAT.

Kindly let me know how to bluestone seed wheat.

Sask. J. L.

Ans.—First get bulletin sixteen from the Government at Regina. Take only the best and cleanest of seed; prepare a solution by taking bluestone in the proportion of about one pound for every eight or ten bushels of seed to be sown. Put the bluestone in a barrel or a half barrel and pour hot water over it in the proportion of about a gallon to the pound. Stir the solution frequently and if all the bluestone does not dissolve add some more water. When the solution is all dissolved, which might take ten hours, get another barrel and make up the solution so that there will be about one pound of bluestone to six gallons of water and you have a solution of about the proper strength. With this you can sprinkle the seed in a heap on the floor, turning it over until every kernel is covered with a film of water, or you can put about a bushel and a half into a sack and lower it into the solution, leaving it there for a minute or two, or a pickler can be used or the solution poured over a half a barrel of wheat and allowed to drain off like the old fashioned way of getting lye. It does not matter much how the solution is applied so long as every grain comes in contact with the fluid. After treating, the seed should be spread out to dry and should be sown within thirty-six hours after treating. Observe care not to expose the wheat to infection from the dust of the granary, as pointed out in last issue under the heading, "Questions on Smutty Wheat."

Formalin (a syrup-like liquid) can be used in place of bluestone if desired, but in the proportion of four and one-half ounces to about ten gallons of water. It is much easier to handle than bluestone and is just as effective, but sometimes comes higher. This is the material to use on oats, but oats should be allowed to soak in the liquid for about five minutes.

FISTULA.

Introduce some biniodode blister inside, as well as out. Use it in the proportion of one in eight of lard. Make a little pledget of tow, rolled in the ointment, and push it as far into the opening as you can, by means of a whalebone or other flexible probe. Reserve the remainder of the blister for application outside, after the tow has come away with the discharge and the wound is practically healed.

PARTIAL PARALYSIS.

Give treatment for a three-year-old gelding. He eats well, drinks well, and is in good heart, but is weak in his hind quarters. When leading to water his hind parts sway. First noticed him in this condition last August while on pasture. Some here say it is similar to swamp fever; but I am inclined to think it is something else. When backed up in the stall sharply (quickly) he groans a little.

Central Alta. S. C. A.
Ans.—The swaying gait behind is a common symptom of so-called "swamp fever," but, it also occurs as the result of an abnormal condition of some portion of the spinal column, which may have been caused by an injury from a blow, or from jumping, slipping, being cast in a cramped position and struggling to rise, etc. Softening of a portion of the spinal column, producing paralysis of a greater or lesser degree, sometimes arises from constitutional causes other than "swamp fever". Paralysis, when the result of organic disease of the spine is, generally speak-
