Poetry.

A MEMORY. From CLAUDE DE HAVEN'S "LEGEND

- If he ltad come in the early dawn, When the sunrise flushed the earth I would have given all my heart,
- Whatever the heart was worth. If he had come at the noon-tide hour, He would not have come too late; I would have given him patient faith,
- For then I had learned to wait. If he had come in the after glow, In the peace of the eventide, I would have given him hands and brai
- And worked for him till I died. If he comes now, the sun is set, And the light has died away I will not give him a broken life,

But will turn and say him "Nay."

Selections.

An Esquimaux Wedding.

Shortly there entered in perfect silence a cortege drawing a dog-sled in which was seated the high priest of the tribe, and a more villainous object I never beheld, He was stripped to the waist and was smeared with oil and coloring matter in stripes which gave him the appearance of a Chinese joss: on his head was a tiara of bear's claws surmounted by an enormous polar bear's head. On his shoulders were of the surface of th polar bear's head. On his shoulders were placed erect on end two large walr red flannel which had been obtained from the clothing of a drowned sailor washed ashore. The lower part of the body was covered with otter skins, over which were spread a number of young seals all alive and barking; in the right hand he held a spear, which he waved aloft in a theatrical manner, while with his left he motioned to the bride and groom to approach shouts of gladness capered around the priest's chariot. This he submitted to for the space of ten minutes, then, imperious ly waving his spear, commanded silence himself on the earth upon his back, and the bride directed to place her right foot upon his throat, which she did evidently with reluctance. While in this position the priest instructed the groom that such plighted troth. He was then permitted to rise, and directed to approach the old chief, who placed a spear at his breast, telling him it would be his doom should he prove untrue. He was read to rise, and directed to approach the old chief, who placed a spear at his breast, telling him it would be his doom should he prove untrue. He was read the spear at his breast, telling him it would be his doom should he prove untrue. He was read the spear at his breast, and directed to approach the old chief, who placed a spear at his breast, telling him it would be his doom should he prove untrue. He was read the spear at his breast, and directed to approach the old chief, who placed a spear at his breast, telling him it would be his doom should he prove untrue. He was read the house, at the house, Proprietor.

To Let. was his fate, trodden under foot by men. he prove untrue. He was next directed to his father, who, producing a piece of fisning line, informed him that he would choke to death his offspring should he prove unfaithful. Then, to cap the climax, he was directed to face the entire tribe, who, brandishing their spears, yelled at the top of their voices vengeance on him in the event of unfaithfulness. At this juncture the groom, apparently over. come with emotion, dropped on the ground, and, bowing his head to the earth, ried, "I will be true," until raised to his feet by the bride. How to Hang Fictures.

No picture ought to be hung higher than the height of the average human eye when the owner of the eye is standing. It is the almost universal rule in our houses to hang pictures much above this level, and they cannot be enjoyed there. If the picture is a portrait, or if it have human faces in it, its eyes should look as nearly into ours as possible; and if there be no such simple guide, Perhaps a good rule will be to have the line that divides the picture horizontally into equal parts level with the eye. If one starts in to place them so that they can be easily seen and enjoyed without stretching the neck the least, or stooping the body, he will be pretty sure to do well. In remote farm houses and country taverns we often see pictures, particularly portraits, skyed as high as if their owners had been Academy hangers, and the painters young rivals of a new school. I suppose the reason is that the simple hearted owners think a picture such a precious thing, it can't be hung too securely out of the reach of meddling hands. They are often not clear in their minds as Ending in it any practical relation to human life and society, they treat it with reverence, and put it where it will disturb them as little as possible. But, as people come to enjoy pictures and get some in-tellectual, spiritual nourishment out of them, they want them, as they want their books, where they can see them and use
