FROM DEATH TO LIFE.

There were six of us seated before a blazing fire, which cast a generous glare into the otherwise unlighted room. Outside a winter storm belowed over the chimneys, and beat seriously at the window-panes. Afar off we could hear the gust roaring among the naked hills, now plunging shrilly through the skeleton branches of the trees, and again whirling

They were sitting a little removed from the rest of us, gazing gloomily into the trait. Well, gentlemen, he bent over the us could recover from our amazement BURN SALVE troubled look, and more than once we from her lethargy had detected the exchange of a strangelysignificant glance between them.

"However," he continued, "I shall risk from the subject. it. If you choose to disbelieve it, why I better-I will proceed."

Having filled his pipe and settled himself comfortably in his chair, he began the heart of the prostrate man.

We had labored diligently during the summer and fall, when toward the close of a cold November day, we shouldered our knapsacks and turned our faces homeward.

"Our way lead through a chain of black and rugged hills, toward a frontier town, twenty miles distant, where we intended to take the railroad. A more forbidding wrapped by primeval fires, and destitute of the smallest trace of vegitation. Tall

This fell into a light slumber. time there could be no mistake. Wild long, and, it appeared to me, full of intol erable anguisn, it re-echoed among the crags with fearful shrillness. With an incontrollable start, I turned and shook the Doctor to awake him.

"Be quiet," he muttered; I am awake and heard it all."

"What can it be?" I asked, anxiously surely, nothing human; no one lives in this region for miles around. Perhaps it is a wild-cat."

"No." he said, between his teeth, "such a sound never came from the throat of a wild-cat. There it is again. Listen!"

"The cry was repeated. It was a woman's voice, but it expressed such supreme misery as I believe woman never felt before. It came ringing up the gorge with a wierd and mournful intonation that chilled the blood in my heart. By the doctor's quick breathing I could tell that he was as much affected as myself Neither of us spoke nor moved; both waited for a renewal of the cry, in the hope of arriving at some rational explana-

"Again it came; but now like a low. tremulous sob. I am not a superstitious man, gentlemen, but I confess that I sat there shivering with a species of horror that was utterly new to me. What could it be? Not a living woman, surely, alone and suffering in an inaccessible fastness where we were morally certain nothing human dwelt. And then what misery was it that gave itself such uncanny expression? Not fear, nor bodily pain, but something terrible, something nameless questions in smothered tones, the cry came once again. This time in words we understood:

"Help! Oh, God! help!" "At this intelligible appeal to our man hood, our superstitious weakness at once disappeared. Seizieg a torch from our smouldering fire, we made our way hastily toward a pile of rocks a few hundred yards distant, whence the sound seemed to have proceeded. Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

gray hair is soon original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Noth ing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous, and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm
