IN CHINA!

A Washington despatch of Sept. 1, says: The Russian government has advised the powers that the relief of the legation and foreigners in Peking having been achieved, under present circumstances (absence of the Emperor, Empress Regent and Tsung Li Yamen) there is no reason why the several ambassadors should remain in Peking. M. de Giers, the Russian ambassador, and all Russian subjects are ordered to the coast under escort. Wm. Rockhill, special United States commissioner, now at Shanghai, says the relief of Peking is merely an incident of the crisis, and that if the powers are not in accord all foreigners had better leave China. Marquis Ito, Japanese statesman, considers it dangerous to yield any concession to Chinese conceit or pride, that the present crisis is the greatest in the history of China. Li Hung Chang is in Shanghai, and is said to be intriguing to get the powers to quarrel. On Saturday he told American and English diplomats that the Russians had promised to withdraw from Peking, regardless of the policy of other nations. It is probably thought he is simultaneously advising the Russians that the Americans and British have promised to withdraw.

The publication of the text of the Russian proposals has intensified rather than diminished the suspicion entertained by England of Russia's proceedings. The rupture of the European concert is considered an accomplished fact. Options differ, however, as to the way in which the powers will now group themselves. Some papers think that Great Britain, Japan and the triple alliance will stand together in refusing to leave Peking. The Daily Telegraph, which expresses regret that President McKinley "has committed the United States to follow the Russian lead," considers, however, that Japan, "whose consistent policy since the war of 1894 has been to conciliate and effect a rapprochement with China," will throw in her lot with Russia, and will be reluctantly followed by France, who does not dare to make differences with Russia.

"Events have therefore conspired," says the Daily Telegraph, "to throw the balance of diplomatic power into Lord Salisbury's hands, for Austria Hungary and Italy must side with Germany, who will probably propose some compromise and be supported by England."

The Times feels perfectly clear, it says, that neither Russia nor the interests of England will permit her to follow Russia's example. It trusts that Germany will refuse to leave Peking and express the hope that the report that the state department in Washington disapproved Russia's suggestion may prove correct.

Notifying his Party

Mr. B. Russell, M. P., has published three full newspaper columns of words, the main purpose of which appears to be to take time by the forelock and give notice to his party that he is still in the political field, and that he wishes them "not to forget it." He concludes his three newspaper columns, which he is pleased to entitle, "Mr. Russell's Record," in these words:—

"The policy of the government has been to hold out to any one who would cordial approval and I propose to continue to give it an independent support so long as I shall be honored with a seat as your representative. I need not say how highly I prize the distinction nor how ready I am to spend and be spent in the endeavor to merit it at your hands."

"It has involved me in much weariness of flesh and spirit, called for heavy sacrifices of pecuniary advantage and physical comfort, but in view of hints and suggestions from time to time thrown out as to my presumed ambition to serve my generation in a more lucrative and less laborious sphere I may be permitted to confess with confidence and frankness that in spite of all the labors and sacrifices that my present position may entail there is no other for which I would willingly exchange it and I should count myself happy if again honored with the opportunity to serve you."

"That 'frank confession' is interesting! In spite of the labors and sacrifices that his 'present position entails' he 'frankly confesses' (there is no other for which he would willingly exchange it) 'Certainly there isn't, otherwise he would not be still in the political field and giving his party notice of that fact. 'Frankly,' of course, but scily, he 'confesses,' 'there is no other,' and hence he has determined to hold on to his 'present position' as long as possible, in hopes, like Mr. Micawber, that some 'other' will turn up which he will like better. The whole thing is very 'frank,' and very transparent, too; but of course the party had to be notified, and in a way that it couldn't well take back."

Mr. Russell's three newspaper columns of "record" are of comparatively little importance to the public. The editors of all political parties are quite convinced that he never should have had any record as a member of parliament, and there is little or no difference of opinion between the two parties that the shorter that record is the better for the country.

Mr. Russell's published "record" has, however, some interest for what it does not contain. For example, it does not contain anything to show what he has done to carry out that great pledge and promise of his former campaign, to secure for the people of this country cheap kerosene oil, free from "iniquitous burdens" as had been heaped upon it by "Tory misrule." Mr. Russell is no "doubt clever" "to make the worse appear the better reason," but still he thought it prudent to steer clear of that bit of government record of handling the kerosene oil business over to the Standard Oil monopoly, to the millions of people in increased prices out of the people of this country. Yet he declares "the policy of the government has commended itself to his entire and cordial approval." What, then, becomes of his former campaign and promise of cheap oil?

Another very important piece of Mr. Russell's record about which he has nothing to say, is the "record" made in the committee of parliament, by his labors and sacrifices "for the purpose of shielding the Greit election machine from exposure and the machinists from just punishment. And another record, quite as interesting, was his notorious job of whitewashing Dr. Borden and the rest of the gang against the Emergency Bazaar scandal. Mr. Russell's "record," as published by himself, will thus be seen to be altogether too incomplete to be considered of much public importance. As a notice to his party, if he have one, he no doubt thinks it important. To the electors generally neither Mr. Russell nor his "record" can be of any great future, political interest.—Halifax Herald.
