Cardinals.

CARDINAL OREGLIA.

Rome, Dec. 6.—The Pope was deeply grieved when told this morning that Cardinal Luigi Oreglia di Santo Stefano Aliphan, Dean of the Sacred College, had passed away last night. Although the aged Cardinal's death had been expected, the Pope suffered a shock when Mgr. Giovanni Basso informed him as cautiously as possible of the occurrence.

The Pontiff had always felt toward Cardinal Oreglia a sentiment of great respect and appreciation of the energy with which he had conducted the affairs of the Vatican during the interregnum between the death of Pope Leo XIII. and his own election when Cardinal Oreglia was Chamberlain of the Conclave.

The death of Cardinal Oreglia removed the last of the Cardinals created by Pius IX.

Luigi Oreglia was born on July 9, 1828, at Bode Vaghenas, in Piedmont. At an early age two brothers of Oreglia joined the Society of Jesus, the elder of whom, well known in Rome for many years as Father Joseph, died in 1895. He had long been a scholarly contributor to the Opuscolo Cattolico, which had been founded by him and other prelates in 1878. The younger brother, Father Frederick, is attached to the Church of St. Ignatius, in Rome.

CARDINAL RAMPOLLA.

Mariano Rampolla del Tindaro belonged to a noble Sicilian family. He was born at Polizzi, in the diocese of Cefalu, August 17, 1843, and was raised to the Sacred College by Leo XIII. in 1887, with the title of Santa Cecilia. He was also Secretary of State to His Holiness, prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Loreto and president of the commission of cardinals for the administration of cardinals for the administration of cardinals, both foreign and Italian.

In 1887 he was nominated Secretary of the Propaganda for matters connected with the Orient.

To Catholics as well as to people of other religious denominations one of the most remarkable spectacles in the Church history was that of Leo XIII. acting as arbitrator in a purely mundane controversy between a power that had always been regarded as a principal stronghold of Catholicism and one that occupied an analogous position with regard to the Protestant Church.

The Pope was invited to assume his role not by the King of Spain, but by the Lutheran Emperor William and his Chancellor, Prince Bismarck. The idea of the Pope sitting in judgment on the two great powers at his feet was one calculated to raise the prestige of the Papacy to a bright unknown in recent times, and served to cement the ties between the pontiff and the Emperor during the pontificate of Leo XIII. The Holy See had lost little of its incalculable influence over the various nations of Europe.

It was to Cardinal Rampolla that the Pope was mainly indebted for the request to arbitrate the conflict between Germany and Spain on the subject of the possession of the Caroline Islands. Realizing, as did Premier Canovas, that it would be preferable for the invitation to come from Berlin, instead of from the Spanish government, Cardinal Rampolla availed himself of his friendship with the German Crown Prince to intimate that were Emperor William to appeal to the Pope to act as arbitrator King Alfonso would gladly abide by the decision.

Bismarck at once perceived the advantages of the project, and acceded to the proposal. The invitation for the Pope's arbitration reached Rome in due course, the Pontiff not learning until afterward the part played by Cardinal Rampolla in bringing about so great a tribute to the Church.

It was entirely owing to Rampolla's intervention that the Conservative Prime Minister, Canovas, although in the possession of a parliamentary majority in the Madrid Parliament, resigned his office to Señor Sagasta, with the patriotic object of strengthening the younger regency and of causing the Liberals to become the guardians of the throne, instead of joining the Republicans. The present loyalty of the Church in Spain to the regency is entirely due to the Cardinal's policies.

The power and influence he wielded in the last years of Leo's long pontificate led to numerous coalitions against him and to his final downfall. Like another Cardinal Richelieu, he possessed the "grand manner" in a remarkable degree and was endowed with all the courtesy of the well bred Italian. During the ten years following his dramatic exit after the conclusion of 1903 he took no part in the administration of affairs at the Vatican, confining his attention solely to his duties as a cardinal priest in Rome.

His peculiar attributes served to keep around him to the last an ardent circle of worshippers. It has been said that if ever there was a man fitted to fill the blank in Carlyle's gallery of world's heroes Rampolla would find a place there in the capacity of Hero as Priest. He was called, on authority, "the best understood man in Europe."

Famous Bells.

The enthusiasm of the collector extends itself on subjects of many kinds; but few collections are so interesting as that of Mr. Frank Miller, of Riverside, California, who has spent a great many years and a great deal of energy in getting together his remarkable collection of over 300 bells.

Every quarter of the globe, every oddity of shape and material, almost every historical era is represented.

There are bells from the United States, Mexico, England, Scotland, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, France, Spain, Germany, Holland, India, Turkey, Egypt, Arabia, India, Ceylon, Tibet, Borneo, Burma, China, Manchuria, Japan, the Philippines, Alaska, and the Hawaiian Islands.

There is a cowbell with the name and family arms of Pope Paul III., who excommunicated Henry VIII. It was used on the bell cow of the Vatican herd that day. A huge bell from Avignon was once part of the city clock in the town of the Pope. A ship's bell once tolled the watches on one of the vessels that carried the unhappy Acadians from their homes, as Longfellow's poem of "Evangeline" tells.

There is an iron bell from the temple in Mukden, taken by Japanese soldiers in the Russian war. The very bell which hung in the chapel of Molokai, where Father Damien ministered to the lepers, is there. One bell comes from a monastery near Lhasa, and another is a Chinese stone bell, probably over 2,000 years old.

Perhaps the most interesting of all is one that was cast for a church in Valencia, Spain, in 1237. At that time King James of Aragon had just added Valencia to his dominions, and was establishing Christian churches all over the province. The inscription cast on the bell bears the name of the Blessed Virgin, to whom the church was dedicated, of Jesus, of the King of Aragon, and of the bell founder, Quintana and Salvador, as well as the year in which the bell was cast.

The special value of this bell lies in the fact that it is the oldest dived bell in existence. Until Mr. Miller found it in the scrap heap in a London bell-founder's shop, that distinction was held by a bell in Fribourg, Germany, which bears the date of 1258. How this fine old bell got to London can only be conjectured. It may have got there as a ship's bell on one of the ill fated Armadas, or as a Papal present to an English monastery, or as booty from some of the daring raids of Sir Francis Drake on the coast cities of Spain.

However, it got there, no one suspected its value, or indeed its existence, until Mr. Miller discovered it. One found, it was not so easily got out of England, for the British Museum learned of the discovery and made every effort to prevent its being carried to America. But Mr. Miller had bought and paid for it, and after negotiations that lasted almost a year, he was permitted to take it home with him.

Journey To Bethlehem.

Caesar Augustus, the Roman Emperor, is at peace with the conquered world. He is eager to know the number of his subjects, the extent and strength and riches of the country under his sway. He orders that a general census be taken. That order is executed, and his pride is gratified. But herein is shown the depth of eternal wisdom writes Father Chignon, S. J., in his "Meditations." While Caesar thinks only of gratifying his ambition and pride, he is in spite of himself, preparing the ways of the Lord and the proof of His divine mission, according to what had been prophesied centuries before.

Mary is at Nazareth; the days of her delivery are near at hand, and she thinks not of leaving Nazareth, though she well knows that Bethlehem is the place where, according to the prophets, Jesus is to be born. She remains at home, under the roof of her spouse. And yet, in order the better to instruct man and draw him to love his God, the Son of God will be born in a stable. Mary is the wife of a poor tradesman. The Holy one that is to come must be recorded, so that the documents may show, in an authentic manner, the date and place of His birth, that the whole world may bear testimony to the perfect accomplishment of Messianic prophecy. Finally the long expected Messiah is to be born in the most squalid poverty and destitution. He who is to establish a kingdom not of this world, is destined

To Suffer From Headaches

MAKES LIFE MISERABLE.

It takes a person who has had and is subject to headache to describe the suffering which attends it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, and then again over the whole head, varying in its severity by the cause which brings it on, purely indicates that there is something amiss with the system. The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble is due to its success in relieving and permanently curing the cause of the headache.

Mrs. Anderson, 418 1/2 Ave. East, Calgary, Alta., writes: "For three years I was troubled all the time with such headaches and suffered also with constipation, and sleeplessness and in general, was on my face. I tried everything all at last a friend told me of Burdock Blood Bitters. I took two bottles, and my skin is as clean and pure as a baby's, and I have never been troubled with the headaches since."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FRANCE.—On December 16

the French Government instructed its Ambassador in St. Petersburg and its Ambassador in Berlin to inform the St. Petersburg and Berlin Governments that France had accepted the British proposal that Greece be allowed to keep nine out of the eleven islands occupied by her during the Balkan war, the other two, Tenos and Imbros, to be returned to Turkey. Italy, in the opinion of the French Government, should restore to Turkey the eleven islands still held by her since they were occupied during the war in Tripoli. Similar instructions were sent to the French Embassy in St. Petersburg.—On the same day the measures envisaging the imposition of an 18-month moratorium on the issue of the proposed Government loan of $200,000,000 were withdrawn. It was announced that the Government would shortly have ready other bills to be presented to the Chamber in their place.—Joseph Caillaux, Minister of Finance, has issued a new circular addressed to the banks and the public amplifying the notice sent out by the Government in 1907 concerning foreign loans, none of which may be listed on the Bourse without the consent of the Ministry of Finance. The new circular was made necessary, according to the Finance Minister, by the efforts of Provisional President Haertel of Mexico and of several of the Balkan States and Turkey to arrange for loans without the countenance of the French Government, which has the power of affecting the value of any loans by refusing to admit them to quotation on the Paris Bourse. The circular says this condition relates not only to loans properly so-called and consolidated issues of every kind, but also to the negotiation of Treasury bonds and general issues of all Treasury securities. On the result of what would be the proceeds of a foreign loan, "Considerable ill feeling is manifested in the press against Italy," attending towards France, the apparent loss of the Eastern Protectorate furnishing the latest reason for offense.
