The Feast of Chanukah.

The Feast of Chanukah, also known as the Feast of Dedication, and by other appropriate titles, occurs this year on December 13th, and will be observed in Jewish homes and in the House of God for eight days thereafter, starting from the evening of December 14.

This festival is a minor holiday and is reminiscent of the Maccabean victory in the battle for Israel's faith when the prophets promise was verified: "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

It recalls in particular the eventful years of 168 to 165 B.C.E. in Palestine. During that period Antiochus Epiphanes, or "the mad man," King of Syria, had resolved to quench the lamp of religious liberty and resort to the crude tyrannies of Imperialism to compel all subject peoples to speak one language and worship according to a ritual approved by the appointed priests of his empire and their religious heads, who naturally followed the polytheistic liturgy of the Greeks, then in a state of decadence.

The enforcement of this royal decree was mandatory on all peoples, including the Palestinian Jews. In compliance with this tyrannical edict the Temple on Mount Moriah (Jerusalem) was desecrated and the altar of the high priest was displaced by a hideous idol, the work of man's hands, and an abomination of human shame and self-degradation. Throughout the country, many weaklings, fearing the mandates of Antiochus, yielded to the promptings of their frightened hearts and listened to the tempting voices counseling treason of the monarch and worshipped the idolatrous images. It seemed as if Israel and his sacred heritage were doomed to be swept away by the rising tide of heathenism.

The enforced obedience to these idolatrous practices of paganism which were an abomination to the Jew and a source of irritation was a factor in fanning the flames of revolt that soon broke out when Imperialistic tyranny added oppression to violence. The hatred germinated in the hearts of the Palestinian Jews against Antiochus resulted in a revolt that instantly led to war against Syria.

This insurrection was headed by a priest of Modin, Mattathias by name, a member of a princely family who rallied a small band of loyal followers to defy the king and wrest freedom for his countrymen from the tyrannies and blasphemies of the mad emperor.

Supported by Judah, his son, to whom tradition has given the name Maccabee, and his four heroic brothers, the Maccabees led to triumph the handful of embattled Palestinian farmers who, by their invincible strength and death-defying zeal for their God and country, defeated all the Syrian generals sent against them in successive campaigns covering a period of four years.

The final victory of the insurgent Maccabees happened according to the Hebrew calendar on the 25th day of Kisle, corresponding to the month of December, in the year 165 B.C.E. Following the victory the Temple at Jerusalem was renovated, the idolatrous images removed and the altar rededicated to the worship of the one and only God.

The sanctuary thus rededicated rose from the dust of its desecration in greater beauty. Israel now became endowed with new strength for the spiritual contest through the ages against error and superstition. In the Jewish religious school and in many Jewish homes, the celebration of Chanukah with its lights, symbols of cheer and hope, recounts these historical events and emphasizes the firm conviction that the day will come when justice, love and mercy will be exalted and selfishness and hatred between races and religions laid low. This festival voices the hope that all men will eventually be banded together in one covenant of love and righteousness and all mankind will turn to God alone as Ruler of the World.

Fads and Fashions.

Newest frocks feature simple decoration of leather and fur. A straight silhouette is featured by many new coats for spring.

Gray gloves striped with black are among the new accessories.

There is a decided vogue for the evening gown of metallic cloth.

One famous milliner is producing nothing but black or brown hats.

The use of ruffles and wool embroidery is noted on crepe blouses.

Small girls are wearing gold embroidered satin mandarin suits.

It is reported that French gowns for spring will be shown in soft tones.

Satin-faille and taffeta are shown embroidered in color and tinsel.

A wealth of temporary hand-blocked velvet is trimmed with feathers.

Evening wraps of bright rose and blue velvets are collared with rich fur.

One notes silver and steel embroidery upon chiffon and Georgette.

Fight of The Sultan.

The Sultan Mohammed VI. has abandoned Turkey, alarmed by Ankara's threats to treat him as a traitor. General Sir Charles Harrington escorted him on board the British battleship Malaya, where he was received by Admiral Osmond de Beauvoir Brock. The Malaya then left for Malta.

A battalion of Irish Guards at Yildiz Barracks was on the usual early parade when several large closed motor cars drew up outside the closed back gate in the 20 ft. high wall that surrounds the gardens of Yildiz Kiosk, the Sultan's palace. Suddenly the tall, solid gates were thrown back and out of them came a party of a dozen men in civilian clothes. The battalion at drill formed as if accidentally a guard to keep off anyone who might try to approach.

Accompanied by General Hille and the commanding officer of the Irish Guards, this small party got into the cars, which drove off down the steep hill towards the quay at Tophane, on the shore of the Bosphorus.

GRATEFUL FOR BRITISH PROTECTION.

In this inconspicuous way did Mohammed VI., the last of a long line of once powerful Sultans, escape from his own palace, driven out by the menace of his Nationalist subjects. It was necessary that he should leave with these precautions of secrecy to avoid any attempt at violence by the Nationalist forces in Constantinople.

Their seizure in daylight in the streets of Constantinople of the anti-Kemalist editor, Ali Kemal Bey, and his subsequent brutal murder at Ismid had been evidence of their ruthlessness against those whom they consider their enemies.

On the quay at Tophane General Harrington was waiting to receive the Sultan. Mohammed, who is 61, looked a frail old man as he climbed slowly out of the motor car. But the British officers who had brought him down said that he had kept up on the way a constant conversation through the First Chamberlain as interpreter.

The Sultan was wearing a well-cut black overcoat with a velvet collar, and his head was covered with a fez. He seemed to have little luggage. Two suitcases and a trunk were all that was put into the launch that took him to the Malaya.

WITH HIS YOUNG SON.

On the way to the battleship he thanked General Harrington warmly for enabling him to get away. He said that it was a great relief to feel himself in safety under British protection.

On the quarter-deck of the Malaya Admiral de Beauvoir Brock and his staff were waiting, and the Sultan, with his suite of 9 officials and his 10-year-old son, was taken down to what would be the admiral's quarters if the Malaya were a flagship at the stern of the vessel. A fire was burning in the open grate, and the bright quilt-covered furniture of the large white room made it look as cheerful a refuge as anyone could desire.

Later in the morning Mr. Neville Henderson, Secretary of the British Embassy, who is acting as High Commissioner now that Sir Horace Rumbold has gone to Lausanne, visited the Sultan to hear any wishes he might express before leaving. Then the Malaya weighed anchor and steamed into the Sea of Marmora.—Daily Mail.

SANTA'S BELLS.

The children hear the ringing of Santa's string of bells, as he comes blithely swinging across the moors and fells. They hear his reindeer loping beneath the wintry sky, they listen, and they're hoping he will not pass them by. I listen too, but only discordant things I hear; the night is dark and lonely, the wind is bleak and drear. The snow is on the gables, the wind beats at the door, and I am old and fables appeal to me no more. I have a golden chalice, a diamond-studded fan; I'm living in a palace, I have a rich sedan; I'm decked in purple raiment, I have a costly lyre, I'm fixed to make the payment for all I may desire; my aunts, in priceless sables, go sloshing through the mart, but snow is on the gables, and snow is on my heart. I listen for the ringing that only children hear; I listen for the singing of Santa to his deer. And I would give my plunder, my lyre and dachshund too, if I could hear and wonder, as little children do. There are no elves or witches, or fairies by the streams; but all an old man's riches aren't worth a bairn's dreams.

PROBABILITY OF LIFE ON VENUS.

BOSTON.—The existence of life on the planet Venus may be considered highly probable, Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Observatory, said in a recent lecture here. He added that the question of life on Mars was controversial, but that its small mass and its great distance from the sun counted heavily against the probability of life there. "Venus," he said, "is comparable to the earth in many ways and it, as is likely, living organisms develop wherever conditions are suitable over a sufficient interval of time, then it may be considered that life on Venus is highly probable. On no other bodies in the solar system, however, are conditions at all favorable for the existence of protoplasm." Dr. Shapley said that accepting the tidal evolution theory of a planetary system, even for stars otherwise favorably located, an encounter of just the right sort with another star was necessary for the birth of a planetary system. "And once such a family is born," he continued, "other stars must not disturb the family, and the star's light intensity must remain essentially uniform for the enormous interval of time required for the crustal evolution which must precede animal origins."

OTHER LIVING EARTHS.

"Nevertheless, it appears probable that among the thousands of millions of stars, there are here and there planets that conform to the requirements. Although the animal man is probably not duplicated in the universe, there are doubtless numerous other living earths, and the chance that their life phenomena surpass in intricacy and 'highness' those on the earth is as good as the chance that they fall below our level." The search for habitable worlds, he said, was largely a search for conditions suitable for the existence of water in a liquid form. "This," he added, "was an absolute necessity for the development of life such as that on the earth, and a definite chemical constitution for air, land and water was also necessary. A planet's days and nights, therefore, must not be so long as to prevent the existence of water in a liquid form. 'It seems uncertain,' he said, 'that some water exists on Mars at times in a liquid form. The average astronomical opinion is that low forms of organisms may exist on Mars, that high forms are very improbable, and that beings physically comparable with man are absolutely impossible.'"

Mussolini Remembers Old Friends.

ROME.—Mussolini, the new Italian Premier, has given an appointment in his office to Captain Lohengrin Girard who, during the war, commanded a platoon in which Mussolini was a corporal. Both Mussolini and Girard were wounded in action and decorated for valor.

A beaded design in soft shades of rose is used on a gown of dull ivory satin.

The three-piece costume will probably be extremely good for the spring. Included among the materials for spring are prints of all sorts—all gay in color.

Bands of vari-colored metallic ribbon are used on a frock of sheer white net.

For Palm Beach, hats of French crepe are trimmed with Jack Frost embroidery.

Bisque, gray and white are the favored shades in the overblouses of crepe de chine.

"I Can Now Do My Work Without Feeling Tired"

Mrs. A. Moffatt, Roxton Falls, Que., writes:

"I suffered from a run-down system and nervous debility. I could not sleep or rest at night, and felt so weak I could not walk any distance. I took several tonics, but they only helped me while I was taking them. Mother advised me to take Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I felt great benefit from the first box, and continued taking several boxes. Today I feel like a new woman, and am able to do my work without that dreadful tired feeling."
