OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what you have done for me. I was cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Frank Estley, Lindsay, Ontario

to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend this medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and think they are fine."

Frank Estley, Lindsay, Ontario

We cannot understand why women will take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, without first trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration.

YOUTH AND AGE

In Coles Phillips' new book of drawings, "A Gallery of Girls," there is a picture of amusing and yet rather pathetic significance, with the caption, "Forward and Back." Two women, one on each side of a large clock, cling to its hands. One is young; the other is past the happy period. The younger pushes the hand forward; the other would push her backward.

FORWARD AND BACK. One would hasten, the other retard the inevitable flight of Time. The little girl still in the digits is never so happy as when, in an old skirt, she plays at being "grown up"; the miss in her early teens worries her mother to lengthen her dresses. But, once the twenties are well under her years, and her reluctance increases in arithmetical progression as she grows older, she resorts to dyes and "tintings" that deceive no one—hardly herself. The drug store's soda fountain is hardly more a source of revenue than the lotions and creams and apocryphs with which women essay to fight the encroachments of age. It is not until she is unmarried "old"; not till she acknowledges herself vanquished, that she will admit her years with a certain pride that she has lived so long. Thus her period of reluctance seems to be sandwiched between two periods of acquiescence.

Now, of course, it is no one's business how many years a woman has achieved. What she has made of them is far more important. But, after all, why should she be so reluctant to confess? Why fib about it in the face of convincing circumstances? She cannot blame her for declining to satisfy important staid evidences. She cannot blame her for declining to answer in answering curiosity, but women have been known to drop off three or five years in answering a physician's questions, and a woman's reluctance to swear to her age on the witness stand is a paragrapher's jest.

"Betty—if I might think—," he began, but his tongue stumbled. His love-making was usually of a sort that held him in some quality in the girl held him in check. The words he had spoken many times before forsook him. Betty drew away from him, an angry color on her cheeks, and an angry light in her eyes. "Don't you know what I'm trying to tell you?" he cried, and again he rested a heavy hand on her shoulder. "Don't you know what I'm trying to tell you?" he cried, and again he rested a heavy hand on her shoulder. CHAPTER VI

Betty Seated Out for Tennessee.

Bruce Carrington came of a westward-looking race. From the time he was a boy he had followed the rivers to their heads. The headwaters had sent them forth toward the foothills, where they made their headwaters, and he followed them. Carrington's father had put the mountain cabins in the shadow of the blue wall that for a time marked the furthest goal of their desires. But only for a time. Crossing the mountains, they found the headwaters once more, and he followed them. Carrington's father had put the mountain cabins in the shadow of the blue wall that for a time marked the furthest goal of their desires. But only for a time. Crossing the mountains, they found the headwaters once more, and he followed them.

When Making Clothes

To prevent the running of ink that is so distressing when clothing is to be marked, it is said that if the letters are first traced in pencil the ink will not run.

Another method is to put the garment to be marked over an embroidery hoop and hold it taut with one hand. The smallest sized hoops may be bought for this purpose and kept with the marking ink.

When marking only for the purpose of distinguishing the belongings of various members of the family a single initial is enough. The quickest way to put this on stockings or anywhere that writing cannot be done is to work an initial in chain stitch, using red cotton for the purpose.

Some mothers of large families mark all their children's belongings in blue, another's in red, and so on, so that the clothes may be sorted quickly, according to the color of the marking.
