M'FARLAND AND GIBBONS BOTH PICKED AS WINNERS

Quite a Difference of Opinion as to the Victor in Saturday's
No-Decision Bout—World's Biggest Boxing Crowd
Witnesses the Fight.

The winner of the McFarland-Gibbons fight at Brighton Beach, N. Y., Saturday night is hard to pick out. The bout was a no-decision affair under the boxing law of New York State, and the various boxing experts are decidedly different in their opinions. About the only thing they agree on is that the largest crowd that ever witnessed a boxing bout, filled the big arena and that the promoters made a fortune out of the match, despite the fact that they had to pay out nearly $50,000 to the fighters and the owners of the arena. However, when it comes down to naming the winner of the bout, some claim McFarland won the victory by his excellent work in the last few rounds, and others give the honors to Gibbons for his splendid showing in the early rounds. Had the bout been a decision, under the referee, no doubt, would have called it a draw. Two different stories of the fight are printed below, so Advertiser readers can take their pick.

This is what the boxing expert of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle thought of it and why he picked Gibbons. Before the largest crowd that ever witnessed a boxing match in this country, Mike Gibbons of St. Paul outpointed Packey McFarland of Chicago in a ten-round no-decision contest at the Brighton Beach Motorrome last night. The bout, which brought to the city of the cleveland boxers in the ring today, was disappointing to those who had expected a hard fight. Gibbons scored the more frequent and more effective blows.

McFarland showed that his long absence from the ring had dulled his speed and power to snap punches to vulnerable points of his opponent's head and body. McFarland showed flashes of his old rapid-fire left, but the leads were little more than slaps and did not check Gibbons in his more effective assaults. McFarland appeared nervous when he entered the ring and was not as finely conditioned as his opponent. The St. Paul Phantom immediately took the aggressive and at times gave evidence that he intended to make a fight of it instead of a sparing exhibition.

Packey smiled throughout. The greater number of his blows that did not land with the open glove, and he paid out to the damage of the crowd that could easily see that McFarland was not attempting to do any real fighting, or to land frequently. The Chicago boxer repeatedly called upon the Chicago boxer to close his gloves. Packey, however, simply smiled at the men in his corner, and thought of the $17,000 he was gathering for his evening's work.

Gibbons has better of five rounds. Gibbons had the better of the third, fourth, sixth, eighth and ninth rounds. Packey had a slight advantage in the first, seventh and tenth chapter of the bout. The second and fifth were fairly even. Packey's spirit and work were in the seventh and tenth rounds. In the former chapter, Packey did some real punching. In the last round the Chicago fighter sought to advantage, as Gibbons was tiring.

To tell the truth, both boys have done better work in their recent training here. Gibbons looked as fit as a fiddle when he was during his training, and it was hard to believe that he had actually made 147 pounds at any time yesterday. He was a kid as much as when he was here, his custom during his recent work was, he took no more interest in the fight than a schoolboy in his books. The fast warm-up and warm-up was his, he slipped away at Gibbons with his open hand as though he were killing mosquitoes, and a great part of the fight was a matter of the Chicago sports who were sitting in his corner.

Gibbons appeared to be a little bit overtrained, and was decidedly miffed at the end of the contest that he had won from Chicago. The fight created very little enthusiasm. The spectators in the ring were not very much interested in the money round, but they had spent for the privilege of witnessing the bout as McFarland did of any effort to please them. McFarland made a pass at Opponent.

After Fight. At the end of the bout, Gibbons went forward to shake hands with his opponent. He did not seem to like the overtures of the St. Paul boxer and made a pass at Gibbons. It was uncalled for and brought a yell from the crowd.

There was power behind almost every blow that Gibbons landed, and he found little difficulty in beating the stocky fighter who had been a contender for the head and body.

In the fifth round Gibbons took the aggressive, and, being thoroughly warmed up, fought desperately to stem the tide of defeat. Gibbons met him half-way, however, and the best of the Chicago boxer could get was an even break. Mike increased his speed in the sixth and scored the majority of effective blows. McFarland made a strong play for Gibbons' body, but the latter covered so well that few of them reached their objective. Packey cut loose in the seventh and rained a shower of blows to Gibbons' face.

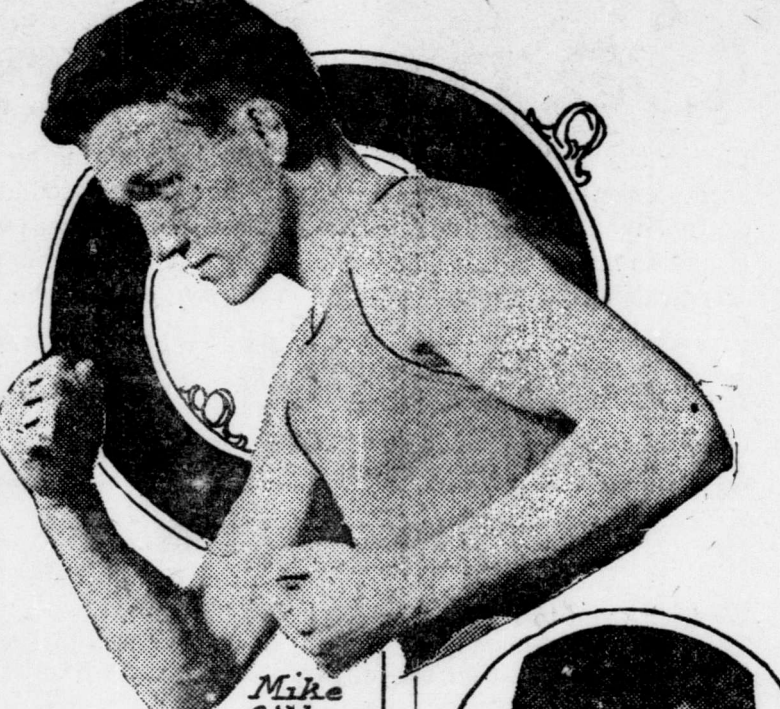

McFarland tried to outslug his opponent in the next period, but although the latter was beginning to weaken he staggered Packey with several blows to the head. McFarland, however, had a shock during the round. McFarland came up with a smile in the eighth and fought with something of his old confidence. Gibbons more than offset the blow, and continued his advantage up to the final round. The long lead that Gibbons had gained in the earlier rounds, however, was too great to be overcome, and the consensus of opinion was strongly in favor of the St. Paul boxer as the winner on points of the largest purse ever offered for so short and a decisionless bout.

After the bout, Packey was surrounded by a horde of friends. He, however, found time enough to say: "I won't say I won, but I will say I am lucky. Gibbons is a good, tough boy, but I knew that I could win. No, I never will fight again. Well, he will if someone else shows me as much money. If I knew as much before the fight as I know now, I would not fight for $17,500, but for fifty-thirty of the house. The Marshalls made a fortune out of this affair. I am glad of it, as they are both mighty clean sportsmen."

After the fight, McFarland made a bee line for the Brighton swimming bath and took a shower. He stated that he would leave on Monday for Chicago.

"I Won," Says Gibbons. Gibbons was not so modest as McFarland. He said: "Of course I won. I admit that I had a hard time doing it. Packey was in far better condition than I thought he would be. No, I have no in-

Flint Blanks Orients Both In Runs and Hits

McCormicks Win Deciding Game in the Commercial League Saturday.

McCormicks won the championship of the Commercial League in a game played at Tecumseh Park Saturday afternoon with the Orientals. "Yank" Flint, pitching for the biscuit men, blanked the Orientals for five innings without a hit. Down to the hard head of the slippery shoulders of the curley-haired Irishman from Chicago, and never did serious damage.

There was a little blood spilled, Mike in an early round cut open a simple under Packey's right eye. Only a few drops fell from this. Packey hit the back of the head that was a bit of vim back of it, cut a little snag on Mike's left eyebrow. It was an easily earned $17,500 for Packey and a pretty soft $15,000 for Mike.

Never Such a Boxing Crowd. But though the fight wasn't wonderful, the occasion was. Nowhere else in the world, those who, for such things say, did such a crowd gather for a boxing match.

The old cycle-racing track, with its sloping boards of the cycle course itself, and then in a huge oval toppling the planks, held, it was figured by the hard head of the slippery shoulders of the curley-haired Irishman from Chicago, and never did serious damage.

The boys of Coney Island which are affectionately referred to as "good" and "old" the days when Corbett, Jeffries, Sharkey, Fitzsimmons and those old-timers fought—never saw anything like this.

Thousands in Throng. At least 1,000 women (and well-dressed and nice-looking women, the kind you see at a theatre or a concert) sat in the throng and enjoyed the spectacle.

A million dollars' worth of automobiles, parked in the open land surrounding the grounds, brought to the place representatives of fashion, of wealth, of politics, of sportsmanship. New York certainly never saw a crowd like this.

A couple of months ago, when Bill Marshall, who had never seen a prize-fight, had never been so much as a model on any night, announced that he was gambling $50,000 in promoting this match—$25,000 to contestants and the rest for expenses—a lot of people laughed at him.

tention of retiring. I am ready to box anyone of my weight, but I never will enter into the ring for less than $5,000. Tonight has shown me what can be done for a properly managed and properly matched bout. I am glad that the Marshalls came out so well in the venture."

HESPELER BEAT PRESTON IN SACH PROPHY GAME

PRESTON, Sept. 11.—In a rattling good game in the Sach's series played here this afternoon, between Hespeler and Preston, the locals came out on the short end by the score of 10 to 1.

The game was the finest exhibition of ball seen at the local grounds this year and the large crowd that was in attendance got its money's worth. Henry, of the visitors, pitched a grand game. While Walker, of the locals, pitched the best game of the two and deserved to win, a couple of bad errors in the first inning, gave the visitors two runs. A number of rooters were present from Hespeler and the game was full of excitement all the way. Hespeler's chance for winning the Sach trophy was very bright, as they only need one more win to capture the silverware.

Batteries—Hespeler—Henry and French, Preston—Walker and Faust. Umpire—Graig and Doyle.

SHAGMEN ARE PLAYING AGAINST CUBAN GIANTS

Frank Shaughnessy and his Ottawa Senators have been barnstorming this past week. They played the Cuban Giants in Peterboro on Friday, and were beaten, 3 to 2, in ten innings. Ottawa has a new backstop named Swanton. Kubat pitched against the Giants in Peterboro, and twelve hits were made on him. The Senators only got four hits off the Cuban pitcher. Starting yesterday, the Giants and Senators opened a four-game series at Ottawa.
