SONS OF CANADA
WENT OFF TO WAR
THIS WEEK—1914

Just Nine Years Ago Since the First Canadian Army Gathered at Valcartier.

INCIDENTS OF CAMP

Nine years ago this week saw the gathering of the first big Canadian army at Valcartier camp, the tented city planned by the British and the Canadian governments, with a remarkably short time through the genius and energy of the late Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, in 1914 minister of militia.

From all parts of the Dominion the volunteers for service in the war with Germany gathered, and with much enthusiasm started in to make the best of the life for which they had signed up, little caring how long it lasted, so it brought about the downfall of the Prussian beast.

Valcartier itself, situated about 25 miles outside Quebec, and on the banks of one of the tributaries of the mighty St. Lawrence, formed an ideal camp site. In a hollow, surrounded by hills, the spot was well suited for the ceaseless maneuvering and skirmishing through which the Canadian troops had to go in order to fit themselves for the business of fighting.

From early in the morning until late at night battalions and batteries could be seen wending their ways in the direction of these hills and wooded slopes. Off to one side would be seen a brigade of infantry starting out in close formation, afterwards extending and surrounding this place or that with much expenditure of blank cartridge. Off the other way would be a brigade of artillery, three batteries, ammunition column and headquarters, with horses straining and men alert for the commands that accompany the orders "action front" or "action rear."

Getting Into Shape.
"Advance in column of route from the right," was a common command, and the men and horses soon brought themselves to the required point of training as far as drill went. There remained the practice with live ball and shell. This also was done, and the camp finally concluded on Sept. 24 with a review by His Highness the Duke of Connaught, governor-general of Canada.

Several incidents stand out in the memory of the oldtimers, who were present at that great gathering place. Probably the most distinct among all is the burning of the tented moving picture theatre, which late one night was destroyed by a number of the men who decided that it would be the right thing to do if they taught the proprietor to change his pictures. Night after night the same film was shown, and the men became disgusted.

Among the mounted men the story of the stampee is still related with much laughing. It happened one night when a nervous sentry fired his rifle off at a shadow. He was stationed near the pontoon bridge, on the camp side of the river, while on the other side was a big harbor wire enclosure, containing hundreds of horses just off the range. With the sound of the rifle the horses surged to one corner of the fence and broke through. With a sound like thunder they tore across the pontoon bridge and down through the artillery and cavalry lines, taking the horses of these units with them. Within a few minutes the camp was in an uproar, and men were scurrying here and there in an effort to round up the frightened animals. By the next morning the majority had been found, but for days afterwards the French farmers were hearing in horses. It has been stated on good authority that the farmers themselves benefited by the stampede to the extent of keeping the odd horse.

Bathers Surprised.
One of the most amusing incidents occurred one balmy day when a number of men took the opportunity to bathe in the river. They neglected the formality of bathing suits, feeling that they were quite secure from intrusion. But just as they were nicely enjoying the swimming some of them standing on the bank clad in Nature's garb and others in the water, a large motor load of girls drove up. With shriek that echoed the skies the girls burst out roaring, and the boys immediately took to the water.

Many other little happenings that took place there could be mentioned, but it would take a book to hold them all. Let it suffice to say that at Valcartier the men of the first contingent received their training which made them the most feared and rock-solid fighters engaged in the war. "Rock solid" was the name given to them and the name they lived up to.

"COD-LIVER" OIL FROM SHARKS.
Much of the cod-liver oil that comes to market is derived from the livers of Greenland sharks, a species numerous on banks off the west coast of Norway, and likewise all over the North Sea and Arctic Ocean. They are from ten to eighteen feet long, and afford a lucrative fishing business.

British Columbia Resents
Treatment From the East

Western Editor Visiting London Talks of Conditions On the Pacific Coast:

Isolation of British Columbia and the westerly provinces from the domination of the east, was the keynote of an interview given The Advertiser today by Walter Jordan, an old St. Thomas boy, now home on a trip to the haunts of his youth. Mr. Jordan, who until a few months ago was managing editor of the Revelstoke Review, was born in St. Thomas, and for eighteen years served on the Journal.

In 1905 he went out to Lethbridge, where with W. J. Buchanan, he founded the Lethbridge Herald, at first a weekly, and later turned into a daily by its founders. In 1917 he became managing editor of the Revelstoke Review, and by his long and varied contact both with the province and the people, is particularly well qualified to speak with authority of conditions in his adopted country.

"The first thing I would bring to your notice," said Mr. Jordan, "is the fact that British Columbia is suffering just now from lack of capital to develop her industries. As Revelstoke is the heart of the timber and mining industry in the province, and so I am in a position to know.

Much American Money.
"The large majority of new capital that has come into British Columbia since 1914 is American. Before the war British and Canadian money was not hard to get, but when the war came along things slackened up in certain directions, and after the armistice it was only with money can that poured into the province. Probably it is just a matter of economics and cannot be helped or altered in any way, only it is illuminating, as showing part of our trouble, still harder under certain circumstances.

Railway Freights.
"The railway freight question you have doubtless heard all about in the east. John Oliver—Honest John, as we call him on the coast—came to Ottawa, and did his best for us, with what results you know as well as I. On the merits of the question I am not in a position to judge accurately, but I do know that the feeling in the Pacific province is that they have been discriminated against, and that it rattles.

"Then there is the question of Asiatic labor on the coast. It is another problem we are facing alone. At present it has not reached the stage of a serious menace. But we don't mean in the way of war, but in the way of increased population and the fact that we cannot, and never can completely assimilate them in this country.

Liquor Control.
"So you see, what with the American capital, and the freight rates problem, and the question of the Asiatic, we in British Columbia are not in the mood to look with very friendly eyes towards the East." In speaking of governmental control of liquor in his province Mr. Jordan, with a chuckle threw a new light on the question. "We have had four plebiscites on this question out there. In the first three the 'wets' were defeated, and only the men voted. In the last vote the women used their franchise for the first time and the wets gained the day. I know it sounds ungallant to put it that way," he remarked, "but I have heard quite a number of old country women say they would vote in favor of government control and I know it is not an exaggeration to say some stress on that side of the question.

As to the effects of the sale of liquor, Mr. Jordan was emphatic in his condemnation. "I am a member on the Revelstoke Retailers' Association and at every monthly meeting the question comes up. We find that those who are the heaviest drinkers are the slowest payers. Our town has a population of 2,500 and every day in the year we pay $450 to the government for liquor. The stuff sells at $7 to $8 a quart and 'Scotch' is the most popular thing.

Crops Good.
In view of the fact that in this district of Ontario the apple crop has been almost a total failure, Mr. Jordan was asked as the condition of the B. C. crop. He replied by saying that when he left at the end of June the prospects were good and the orchards expecting a bumper crop.

"We have that to be thankful for at least," he grinned.

Mr. Jordan who has sold out his holdings in the paper on account of his wife who is a partial invalid, is returning to the west in the first week of September. He has been staying with his brother-in-law, A. K. Saddler in London township. In spite of all the things he had mentioned, and of all the little troubles in the kit bag of the province that looks so kindly across the sea toward Japan and the Orient, he was joyous at the thought of heading west back. "We are going to live in Vancouver in future," he said, "It's the greatest part in the world to live in and I'm glad to be heading west again."

Does Your work strain the Eyes?

The eye will interpret objects correctly—if the eye itself is normal. But if your eyes do not focus properly everything you see will be distorted and your brain cannot function properly. Bad eyesight is often the cause of many physical ills.

It will be a great saving to you, perhaps, if you have your eyes examined to-day. You will save not only money—but you will make a real investment in physical and mental comfort.

Saskatchewan Professor Says
"Whisper of Death All Rot."

Saskatoon, Sask., Aug. 24.—"The Montreal Star's whisper of death is all rot," said Dr. W. W. Swanson, professor of economics in the University of Saskatchewan, in an address here. "Lord Atholstan has a colossal nerve," added the professor, who was a witness last winter before the agricultural and banking commission of the House of Commons.

The professor said that over-production in agriculture was impossible, and that Western Canada's chief trouble at present was Europe's incapacity to buy.
