Special to The Advertiser. Winnipeg, Oct. 10 .- For the first time during the present dominionwide election tour of Premier King, his war record was challenged here last night and, before an audience of 5,500 people, the premier went out of his way to take up the challenge. When he had completed his answer and invited any further criticism, there was none forthcoming.

Silence deepened as the premier told how he chose to shoulder this responsibility and at the same time adjust several labor disputes for firms making war supplies. This work of conciliation had resulted in these plants greatly increasing their output. It was obvious that his explanation made a deep impression on his listeners. "What did Mr. Meighen do during the war?' someone called out with some derision of tone. "I think Mr. Meighen did his full duty in the light in which he saw it," was the premier's response. It was a fine tribute to a political pponent in the heat of a strenuous election campaign and won the ad-miration not only of those who heard the premier's reply but of many to whom it was repeated after the meet-
