Agriculture

Milk as a Carrier of Disease.

A paper was recently read before the Royal Institution of Great Britain by Doctor Klein, which demonstrated with great clearness the fact that milk is one of the most effective media for conveying such diseases as diphtheria and scarlet fever. Not only did the doctor show from various medical reports that epidemics have been clearly traceable to dairies, the milk from which had been contaminated from human sources, as, for instance, where it was daily carried through a yard where children recovering from scarlet fever were playing about, but that there are cases in which the disease must originate with the cows themselves and is communicated from one to another. Such, in fact, was scientifically shown to be undeniably the case. Cows were attacked by some disease of which the symptoms were sore on the teats, loss of milk, etc. Experiment proved that the milk from such cows could by inoculation produce the same symptoms in previously sound animals. Experience showed that milk from certain cows that had been used in the treatment of scarlet fever in human beings, and, conversely, that the micrococci from human patients afflicted with scarlet fever by inoculation produced the symptoms already mentioned as affecting the cows. Hence the conclusion is inevitable that the same micrococci produce the same disease in both animals and men, and that the most watchful care is demanded on the part of dairymen and veterinary surgeons, to watch for symptoms of such disease in their cattle, and to keep the affected ones secluded from the rest, as well as to prevent the development of all the parts. Feed liberally, neither stuffing nor starving. All conditions should be normal, so to keep her in good health, causing her to feed and to produce longer periods of years. The length of use is of great importance. If it is profitable to raise a cow at all, the longer her period of usefulness the cheaper she will be.

The Tomato.

The tomato has a curious history. Native of South America, like the potato, it is said to have been introduced into England as early as 1596. Many years elapsed before it was used as food, and the botanical name given to it was significant of the estimation in which it was held by our forefathers. It was called Lycopersicon—a compound term meaning wolf and pear. As a novelty for unknown years, John Bull ventured to taste, and having survived, began to eat with increasing gusto. To our grandmothers in the United States, the ruby fruit was given as a "love-apple," and adorning quaint old bureaus, were devoted by dreamy eyes long before canning facilities were within the ken of even a Yankee's vision. Now, tomatoe vies with the potato as a general article of food, and one can scarcely visit a quarter of the globe so remote but he will find that the tomato can be traced before him. Skill is required in producing an early crop, and to secure this and the earlier the plants are started in spring the better. The tomato is very sensitive to frost, and should not be in the open ground before danger from it is over. In the cold, humid climate of England, the tomato usually grows like the peach along sunny walls and fences, receiving as careful summer pruning as the grape-vine. By training the vines over various kinds of supports, they can be made as ornamental as they are useful. The ground on which they grow should be only moderately fertile, or else there is too great a growth of vine at the expense of fruit. This is especially true if we wish an early yield, and in this case the warmest, driest soil is necessary.

Flower Garden and Lawn.

To have a fine turf, the grass should be sufficiently vigorous to require mowing at least once a week. To mow often and leave the clippings, is better than to let grass get so large that it must be raked up and removed. Remove all poisonous weeds by the roots. If ribbon or other ornamental beds are to be planted in the lawn, do it at once; simple designs are more easily kept in order than the elaborate ones. When the plants begin to grow keep them of the proper height by pinching, and keep the lines between the beds distinct, by cutting away the side branches. Annuals and all other "seedlings" should be kept off the places where they are to bloom. As soon as flowers fade, cut away the unsightly remains, unless seeds are wanted, when only the few that may be needed should be allowed to ripen.

New York hop growers think the industry has seen its best days, in that State. The cost of production has increased, vermin are cutting about the hops year after year, and growers are making extensive and growing use of substitutes for hops. Prices are depressed, and many hop fields are being plowed up and devoted to other crops. In some years the vermin have killed the vines outright.

What Age should a Heifer Calve?

This question has been frequently asked and discussed on both sides of the Atlantic. Some advocates of early calving have advanced the theory that their method is favorable to the development of the milk secretory organs, and that thereby the flow of milk is increased. Actual experiments, however, tend to disprove this statement. In painstaking experiments conducted in Denmark in which heifers having calved when about two years old compared against some having first calved when nearly three, the three-year-olds gave the greater yearly average quantity of milk. The experiment was continued for more than eleven years, and an average of about 150 cows were tested annually. The two-year-olds were especially well taken care of when young, and their weight at entry nearly equalled that of the three-year-olds. If a heifer calves when not mature, she is very liable to become stunted and deformed. It is therefore of importance to have her fully developed before she drops her first calf. This, however, does not say that it is not desirable to have her mature early, for early maturity is a great saving of food and expense. The prevalent practice has been to let all calves drop in spring. Following this fashion, a heifer that is not quite mature at two years old must be kept over until she is three; whereas if she was made to calve when mature, she might drop her young in the fall and thus save half a year's food. The maturity of a heifer must be judged by her appearance when in the best condition, together with the characteristics of her sire and dam, and not by her weight. High feeding does not promote maturity, but rather stunts the perfect and harmonious development of all the parts. Feed liberally, neither stuffing nor starving. All conditions should be normal, so to keep her in good health, causing her to feed and to produce longer periods of years. The length of use is of great importance. If it is profitable to raise a cow at all, the longer her period of usefulness the cheaper she will be.

How Dead Fowls are Sold in France.

One of the most novel things in the way of marketing to be seen, is the disposal of portions of fowls. In Paris half-fowls can be bought, but in Bordeaux the system is carried farther. In one central market may be seen peculiar carcasses hung up on the stalls—carcasses whose leading characteristic seemed to be the absence of meat. There were no legs, or wings, or breast; but it would be found on closer examination the stall contained these portions, offered for sale separately. Thus the Bordeaux house-keeper, able as most of the French are to make a fine dish with little meat, can buy a leg or a wing, or an occasional breast, and need buy no more; and those who like bone-picking can buy by the carcass. The blood is also sold in small dishes, and every portion is used. "Waste not, want not" being the motto there.

The breast collar, sometimes called the Dutch collar, is one having a broad band connected with the traces, and supported only by a light belt over the neck. It is not so easy for a horse to draw heavy loads in this, but it is popular for light work, as driving, because less awkward and cumbersome than the heavy neck collar. It is well to have one or two of these breast collars with extra heavy tugs attached for use on heavy horse-drawn vehicles, being pulled by heavy work ploughing or dragging with the other kind of collar. Do not use it, however, unless it is broad enough on the breast so as to encase the animal from choking when pulling in it. Each horse should have its own collar, and when fitted properly with proper care in working him there will be little danger that it will gall his neck.

Experience is a good thing, and once obtained is valuable, but it is costly. Learning by experience is the far most expensive way known. The author of the old adage, "Experience is the best teacher," but fools will not learn in any other, "understood this principle; and the man who foolishly believes that all his knowledge has been obtained by experience and laughs at printed ideas, is directly admitting that he is one of the fools referred to. This is called a progressive age, and one of the chief signs of progress is in the significant fact that the young man, especially the young farmer, is willing to put into profitable practice the printed experience of others without the expense of learning the same thing experimentally.

During the year 1886, three hundred and thirty-one new trotters entered the 230 class. What would our forefathers say, who went wild over speed, and the three minute trotter, in thought of this number making such a record? Only one of these dropped into the twenty class, whereas in 1885 there were five.

When time hangs up its scythe there'll be no mowers.

SIR CHARLES, 2745.

Is the fastest Standard bred Trotting Stallion in New Brunswick. He can show a 2:10 gait in stud condition. He is a trotter by right of inheritance, as his sire Mambrino Overt had a record of 2:30, and was the sire of Helena 2:36. His grand sire had a record of 2:29, and is the sire of Mambrino Sparkle 2:17. His great grand sire, Mambrino Chief, was the sire of Lady Thyn, 2:18. His dam, Lady Messenger, was the dam of Crown Prince, 2:18; Crown Prince 2:25, and Grey Chester, 2:30. It seems almost impossible for a horse so powerfully bred in speed lines to avoid being a trotter.

Terms: to insure, $20; by the season, $15. For particulars, address JOHN MCCOY, St. Marys, N. B.

ALL SORTS.

Think before you speak.

Keep a watch on your words, my children. For words are wonderful things. They are sweet, like the best fresh honey; like bees, they have terrible stings. They can bless like the warm glad sunshine. And brighten the lonely life; They can cut in the strife of anger. Like an open, two-edged knife.

The medical profession is like a box of strawberries. There is always room at the top for the best.

Dr. Fier's "Favorite Prescription" is not extolled as a "cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singular purpose, being a most potent specific in those chronic weaknesses peculiar to women.

Courting a girl is like starting a newspaper. It starts out as a weekly, then it becomes a daily, then it merges into a daily.

A travelling agent writes us that he was confined to his bed five weeks with rheumatism, and after all remedies failed used Dr. Fier's "Favorite Prescription" and was cured in ten days.

The average age of European girls when they marry, according to a German statistician, is 20 years, while that of men is 28 years.

It is a good rule never to forget the kindly deeds which others do to you, and never to remember those you do for them.

Joseph Rusan, Percy, writes: "I am indebted to Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil for a lameness which troubled me for three or four years, and found it the best I ever tried. It has been a great blessing to me."

A thrifty farmer says fifty cents worth of wild pineapples, blue thread and shoemaker's wax, will save $10 in harness repairs in twelve months.

You can't make a man a gentleman by calling him one. But sometimes you can please him and carry your point, and that is more to your purpose.

Mr. R. C. Winslow, Toronto, writes: "Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Balm is a valuable medicine to all who are troubled with indigestion. I tried a bottle of it after suffering for some time, and the result was certainly beyond my expectations. It assisted digestion wonderfully. I digest my food with no apparent effort, and am now in my frame since 1884, and which I do, I am sure, to the credit of the balm."

The pleasures of the world are deceitful; they promise more than they give, and they are in seeking them, they do not satisfy us when possessing them, and they make us despair in losing them.

Persons who have suffered for years with Asthma will find a quick relief and cure in the double treatment of Southern Asthma Cure.

A new trumpet has been adopted for the French army. As the trumpeters now march in front of the regiment, and the bell of the trumpet has hitherto been turned from the soldiers that follow, they have often heard the animating tones indistinctly; now the bell of the trumpet is to be turned towards the men at the back of the trumpeters.

A Professional Opinion.

Rev. F. Gunner, M. D., of Listowel, Ont., says regarding R. B. B.: "I have used your excellent Burdock Compound in practice and in my family since 1884, and have found it one of the best of all remedies. Your three boys are never ailing, weak or worried."

"Pay as you go and you will get your own brain and your own eyes open. The man who follows this law can eat with better appetite, sleep more soundly, have more comfort in life, be more respected by his fellows and have a better character than he can in following the other and worse way. He will find it easier to pray, easier to believe, easier to help on every good cause. He will live more happily and die more peacefully."

Mr. W. J. Lang, Delmar, Ont., writes: "I was one of the greatest sufferers for about fifteen months with a disease of my ear, and in my family since 1884, and have found it one of the best of all remedies. Your three boys are never ailing, weak or worried."

Has Effected an Entire Cure.

Dear Sir:—I have pleasure in stating that Johnson's Anodyne Liniment I got at your store, has effected an entire cure of my deafness when other previous remedies failed.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe cold, which, from exposure, grew worse and finally settled on my lungs. By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My cough was incessant, and frequently spilt blood. My physician told me to give up business, and I would not live a month. After taking various remedies without relief, I was finally
