In reply to Mr. Meredith the premier stated that the attention of the government had been called to a decision of the court of appeal was taken away in certain cases and that it was intended to propose an amendment to restore the right of appeal in such cases. Mr. Meredith enquired when the franchise bill would be introduced, and Premier Mowat replied that he could not name the day but the provisions of the measure were "under consideration," a statement which was followed by derisive applause from the epposition.

Brady replied that notaries were Mr. Brady replied that notaries were not admitted, as a matter of course, and that Mr. Mitchell had not applied in the right form or passed the required examination. Mr. Meredith urged that Mr. Mitchell had not been fairly dealt with, and to show that political reasons were at the bottom of his exclusion and read an extract from a letter written by Mr. Hardy to the applicant regretting that the latter was on bad terms with Mr. McKim, as it was to be regretted Mr. Mokim, as it was to be regretted that "two such good men" should be a lagggerheads—whereat there was great appliance and laughter on the part of the epposition. respecting mutual fire insurance companies came up for a second reading and explained its provisions. The bill provides that mutual insurance companies shall stand on the same footing as other suitors in being compelled to bring division court suits where the defendants reside, instead of having the avantingal privilege of of having the exceptional privilege bringing action at the head office. urged that the farmers were subjected to great hardship in cases of dispute by suits being brought at a distance from their places of residence, and made a well reasoned, but too lengthy speech, in sup port of his contention. Mr. Young fol lowed on behalf of the companies, and supported the law as it at present stood urging that the effect of the proposes amendment would be to advantage the ioint stock companies at the expense of the mutual institutions. He moved the three months' hoist, seconded by Mr. Gibson of Hamilton. The discounting the model of the control of the con their expectance of mustar many size to the panies. Premier Mowat opposed the bill, admitting that their were some hardships to insurers in the present state of the law, but thought that the balance was in its favor. Peeple need not insure in mutual companies if they did-not like the principle under which they were managed. Mr. Robiilard considered mutual insurance companies a humbug. Mr. Leys followed in a similar strain. Mr. Fraser thought number of companies a humbug. Mr. Leys followed in a similar strain. Mr. Fraser thought that while some of the companies indulged in sharp practice, the law should be fram with regard to the honest and reliable companies, so as not to unduly cripple their queues plaited to suit the most fasticious mandarin, assembled in the neighborhousiness. He thought a good deal of the trouble arose from the insurers not understanding the methods of the companies and the responsibilities they incurred in signing promising notes. He proposed a change there. Mr. Hardy, though he did not altogether agree with the bill, thought it should go to a committee. Mr. Meredith spoke in similar terms. Mr. Young opman's request for admission. No reporters posed the proposition to refer to a committee as it would be endorsing the principle of the bill. They might as well vote to abolish the companies at once. At the suggestion of the premier, who said it appetite was keen about this time the odor would be distinctly understood the house of boiled rice being plainly smellable all was not committed to anything, Mr. Young withdrew his amendment and the bill was read a second time on division and referred upstairs, and to a select committee.

The nouse then adjourned on motion of Premier Mowat in spite of the objections of Mr. Meredith, who said that in addition to the amount of unfinished business there was a special reason why the members should not be at liberty in the evening a he understood there was a dangerous entertainment going on. [Laughter and cries of "Where?" "Where?"] Of course the inevitable member who wanted to knew the year. when those returns would be brought down had to have a last word and to receive the usual consolatory reply that they were being prepared. After which the sergeant at arms yanked off the gilded club, the speaker vacated his shagreen leather throne and the members mingled for a while in friendly converse about the prospects of the Scholes-Mitchell discussion and then all was silence and solitude with the exception of a couple of assiduous members who re-mained to mail documents to their constituents which they will doubtless find very useful in building fires.

True, you might find some difficulty in securing a man of just your military calibre to warm your chair in the war office, but look about and do the best you can. While organizing you might write some small tracts in handy pocket form for the use of your command upon subjects upon which you are an authority, such as "What I know about the Redan," "Jack and Jill went up the hill," etc., etc.

Now in the matter of a Canadian contingent, why should Canadians desire to sush in and grab some of the honor and glory which should in a war like the present belong exclusively to Englishmen? Let Canada send a contingent by all means; but why not have it composed of assisted passage Englishmen, who are dissatisfied with Canada, and who Canada will not hanker after very much—enlist enough of these to form at least one regiment as the honor of old England must be upheld. We will send more if required—in fact I feel satisfied that the people of Toronto alone would see that it was upheld, even though Conway street should be left a howling wilderness.

CELEBRITIES IN OTTAWA.

P. A. LANDRY. P. A. Landry, the gentleman whose name has been connected with the vacant judgeship in New Brunswick by some, and with the lieutenant-governorship, soon to be open, by others, was born in Westmore land, N.B., in 1846. His father, a prominent Acadian Frenchman, had been for several years a representative for Westnoreland in the provincial legislature; and looking to a political career likewise for his son, he set him, on the completion of his education to study law. Pierre was called to the bar in 1870; and in 1881 he was created a Q.C. He entered public life in 1870, having been elected to the New Brunswick legislature, in that year, opposed the "School law" measure persistently till it got upon the statute book; then he logically accepted the fact. In 1878 he entered the prothe fact. In 1878 he entered the pro-vincial government as chief commissioner of public works, and in 1882 became for a short period provincial secretary. Then the administration smashed up, and Mr. Landry appearing once again before West-moreland was sent to Ottawa. Mr. Lan-dry is one of the most prominent and able debaters among the younger members of the anious to this admirable scheme, thought of this admirable scheme, them to understand that for all time to come royal hangers on will have the honor of being sent to the front first and you will find that the house of commons will not be bothered about princely allowances in the future to any great extent.

Admirable scheme, all debaters among the house. He sits next to Peter Mitchen, and wears a silk hat. His keen-cut and rather striking features indicate individuality, and quiet, clear perceptions. He sits next to Peter Mitchen, and wears a silk hat. His keen-cut and rather striking features indicate individuality, and quiet, clear perceptions. His eye is a dark violet, and it is unusually penetrating. He has a very high, white and a prominent nose that reveals indi-viduality. He is, I should say, about five feet ten in height; he wears a frock, and walks rapidly and decidedly. When he is not engaged with correspondence, you see him, his hand behind his ear, listening intently to every speaker of note as if he were getting the measure of all members that may be regarded as prominent. venture to predict that amongst the clear, deliberative and precise debaters of the house he will take a front place. When he rises he is perfectly cool; he invariably has something to say; always has some point not before brought out to disclose. If he has a fault in speaking it is in being too anxious to present his statement that everybody may understand it; but this is a good fault. He is always effective, in the majority of cases is convincing, and he is never undignified, unreasonable or betrayed into extravagant statements by his feelings. But there is a sincere, manly ring to his utterances; and when he sits down few ever rise to gainsay him. His name has been connected with the vacant judgeship in New Branswick; but it would be a pity that he should withdraw his talents from the house. If he desire the judgeship, however, there is no one better entitled to nowever, there is no one better entitled to it. He is an eminent lawyer, and if appointed would be the only judge in New Brunswick who could speak the French language, though one third of the people of his province are Acadian French who are obliged to present their cases through an interpreter.
