When it was announced that the Hon.
Lilian Curren—the emergetic organizer of the Primrose league—was desirous of establishing a Dames' habitation at Snobton, the conservative ladies of that little town were thrown into a flutter of delicitude excitement. As the Snobton people were very conservative, and the women even more so than the men, it was not strange that the Hon. Lilian's project was her at the same time to call a meeting of the conservative ladies of Snobion to discuss the project and make preliminary arrangements. When these were finished, if Mrs. Tallow would kindly inform her, Miss Curzon would be glad to attend the inaugural meeting.

Mrs. Tallow at once accepted this duty, and without delay sent a circular to the other Snebton ladies, stating that by request of Miss Curzon, she desired the honor of their attendance at a meeting at her house for the purpose of making arrangements for establishing a Dames' Appliances, for the speedy relief and perhapsite of the feather weight sile and perhapsite des Chalcur; also New Brunswick, Nova and Elegant Pullman, Buffet, Sleeping and Day Cars run on through express trains, a day appointed many ladies attended. Mrs. Tallow presided, and she noticed with delight her hearers' envious looks, when, in her address from the chair, she referred to the communication which had passed between herself and her friend, Hon. Lilian Curson. The vicar's wife, who expected to have the carrying out of the arrangements herself, was particularly cross; and when, after the meeting was over, she left in company of some of the more genteel folk present, she told them that she felt no very warm interest in the undertaking, as ever since tory democracy came into fashion, conservatism was nearly as bad as radicalism; it was continually truckling to the lower classes.

These remarks, it may be guessed, soon found their way to Mrs. Tallow's ears, but she ofly laughed at them. The vicar's wife, might be as bitter as she pleased; with all might be as bitter as she pleased; which is the delight the discovery with the shape of calomel and blue pill. It had been resolved to call the habitation the "Curzon" in henor of the Hon. Lilian, but just before the inaugural meeting was to take place, Mrs. Tallow received a note from another still greater lady, the wffe of Lord Roughshod's eldest aon, in which she declared her intention of becoming a member. Mrs. Tallow was overjoyed by this communication from so distinguished a persea, and summoned a meeting of the provisional committee to consider how they should recognize the honor the viscountess had done them by joining their habitation. The vicar's wife suggested a measure which was carried unanimously. It was that the habitation should be called after both the viscountess and the Hon. Lilian; that it should be, in fact, "The Curzon and swaren habitation." The vicar's wife and the Hon. Lilian; that it should be, in the control of the viscountess and the Hon. The proposes accordingly communicated to the two ladies, and in due course it received their cordial approval.

The warrant having been duly received, the inaugural meeting was held. It was red-letter day in Mre. Tallow's calendar. The viscountees and the releast boy, lion. Cedi Terrington, and Hon. Lilian Curzon dined at her house before going to an extendinate of the most wealthy and respectable inhabitants of Snobton were of the company. Mrs. Tallow's position of secretary gave her many oppportunities of communicating with the viscountess and Miss Curson, which she did not neglect and they did not discourage. Miss Curson was much interested in, and the viscountess much amused by, the doings of the Dames, and both were glad to hear from Mrs. Tallow. That lady proved indeed an indefatigable secretary, and soon made the habitation very prosperous.

It has already been said that Mr. Tallow did not at first share his wife's ambition to become a member of fashionable society; this, however, was owing to his belief in its hopelessness; but her brilliant success in connection with the brilliant success in connection with the brilliant success changed his mind, and brilliant success in connection with the habitation at ence changed his mind, and he became even a greater votary of fashion than she, He, too, joined the Primrose league, and became a knight harbinger (though he never knew exactly what that meant), and, as in his wife's what that meant), and, as in his wife's
