Just Our Own

Dear Just Our Own Folks—
May I come into your Corner for a little chat, today? I am not the cook of our household but I enjoy the good recipes which our housemother tries, contributed to this column. I want to give you a hint for which I am indebted to one of my friends. This is the time of year when the colored muslin and cotton dresses of the early summer are losing their fresh tints. A mother that I know puts the faded cottons into a bath of cream tartar water, boiling until the cloth is left white. In this way her little girls have many fresh white dresses and pinfawns, which they enjoy wearing much better than the faded ones they would otherwise have to finish out.

This same friend has what I think a sensible way of relieving the nuisance of dishwashing three times a day. She keeps no servant, so it is necessary for her to rise early to prepare breakfast and serve it to her husband, who goes out early. While waiting for the other members of the family to rise she washes up the dishes of the preceding day. They have all been scraped and greasy or soiled ones wiped off with newspaper. The plates and small dishes have been piled into a deep pan or kettle with cover and are out of sight in it. Dainty china dishes have not been allowed to stand, nor have pots and kettles, which are disposed of as soon as emptied of their contents. In this way she says she is free for the afternoon to rest, sew or visit as soon as dinner is over, and also after ten to put the children to bed and then enjoy the remainder of the evening as pleases her. Of course this would not be practicable if she were not an early riser.

JUSTINE.

CANNING TOMATOES.

If these suggestions made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture have been published generally they will bear repetition at the beginning of the canning season.

In canning tomatoes the first step is to select the fruit just sufficient to loosen the skin so that it can be slipped off. To do this, we use a large iron kettle, commonly called a "wash pot." The tomatoes are placed in a cheap tin vessel, holding about one-third of a bushel, that has been punched full of small holes and dipped into the boiling water and allowed to remain about one moment or until the skin will slip readily. The fruit is then peeled, sliced and filled directly into the empty cans. The cans must be well filled for good results. This finishes the first step. The filled cans are then passed to the second stage of the operation. The tops of the cans wiped dry with a clean cloth, the cap placed on and soldered around the rim, the small hole in the center of the cap being left open.

Then we are ready for the third step, that of exhausting—expelling the air out of the cans. This is accomplished by submerging the cans in the boiling water (in the boiler) about two-thirds of their length. They are held there until they come to a boil, or, for tomatoes, ten minutes. They are then removed, the small hole in the center of the top closed with solder, and the cans are then completely submerged in the boiling water and boiled, or processed, twenty minutes, which is the fourth, and last step, in the operation.

Joker's Column

WHY HE WAS FOLLOWED.

A nervous man on his lonely homeward way heard the echoing of footsteps behind him, and dim visions of hold-up men and garroters coursed through his brain. The faster he walked the more the man behind him increased his speed, and although the nervous one took the most roundabout and devious course he could devise, still his tracker followed. At last he turned into a churchyard. "If he follows me here," he decided, "there can be no doubt about his intentions."

The man behind did follow, and quivering with fear and rage, the nervous one turned and confronted him. "What do you want?" he demanded. "Why are you following me?" "Do you always go home like this," asked the stranger. "Or are you giving yourself a two-to-night? I am going up to Mr. Brown's," and the porter at the station told me to follow you, as you lived next door. Excuse my asking, but are you going home at all to-night?"

WHAT HE MEANT.

While visiting a rural district a traveller struck up a conversation with a resident of a sleepy hamlet. "Am I a what?" languidly asked the one addressed. "Are you a native of this town?" "What's that?" "I asked you whether you were a native of this place."

At this juncture there appeared at the open door of the cabin the man's wife, tall, sallow and gaunt. After a careful survey of the questioner, she said:

"Ain't you got no sense, Bill? He means was 'yo' livin' heah when 'you was born, or was 'yo' born before 'yo' begun livin' heah. Now answer him."

SHE HADN'T MORE FEET.

In the absence of his wife and the illness of the servant, Mr. Taylor undertook to help three-year-old Marjory to dress.

He had succeeded in getting her arms in the sleeves and through the arm-holes of her garments, and had buttoned her into them. Then he told her to put on her shoes herself, and he would button them.

He soon discovered that she was vainly trying to put a left shoe on her right foot.

"Why, Marjory," he said impatiently, "don't you know any better than that? You are putting your shoes on the wrong feet."

"They're all de foots I dot, papa," replied Marjory, tearfully.

SO POLITE.

Her (sighing): "Oh, I met such a lovely, polite man to-day!" Him: "Where was that?" Her: "On the street. I must have been carrying my umbrella carelessly, for he bumped his eye into it. And I said, 'Pardon me,' and he said, 'Don't mention it—I have another eye left.'"

KNEW IT WELL ENOUGH.

"There's a sort of a bump right here on your chest," said the tailor, pausing in his measurements, "but we will make the clothing so that you will not realize the bump is there."

"I know you will," sighed the customer. "That's my pocket-book in my inside vest pocket."

WHAT SHE SAW.

Mr. Green (who has been listening to Mr. Brown's account of a trip around the coast): "And how did you like it, Mrs. Brown?" Mrs. Brown: "Well, I didn't see much of the scenery, but the cabin was very comfortable, and the steersman a most sympathetic woman."

HAD HIS DOUBTS.

Goller (who rather fancies himself) I suppose you've been round the links with worse players than me, eh? (The caddy takes no notice.) Goller (in his loudest voice): I say I suppose you've been round the links with worse players than me, eh? Caddy—I heard vera weel what ye said, I'm jist thinkin' about it.

A HELPFUL BOOK.

Professor (to graduating class in college): "Young man, there is one more question I would like to ask, and that is, what books have helped you most in your struggles for an education?"

Young Scadds (promptly speaking up from the foot of the class): "Dad's cheque book has helped me about as much as any of 'em, so far."

Puzzle Corner

Dear Boys and Girls—

We have not heard from as many of you as we should like, but an equal number of you have expressed a desire for puzzles and for stories. We shall continue to give the puzzles for a time at least, and shall also look out for some good stories and poems. If you have any good puzzles send them along and write us a letter also. The boys and girls enjoy reading them. We should be glad to publish also your favorite poems.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

I. CHARADE.

My first is an animal, faithful and true,
My second a person most devoted to you.
My third is a sound often heard on the wall.
My whole is a trait which many would call.
An objectionable one, a trait of the mind
Which in argumentative people you find.

II. ENIGMA.

Five single letters compose my frame,
And what is singular, when viewed my name
Forwards and backwards will be found the same.
When I'm discovered, you will plainly see
What the proud peer and peasant soon will be.

ENIGMA.

I am but small, yet when entire
Enough to set the world on fire.
Leave out a letter, and 'tis clear
I can maintain a herd of deer.
Leave out another, and you'll find
I once contained all human kind.

ENIGMA.

The beginning of eternity,
The end of time and space;
The beginning of every end,
And the end of every place.
