

—a study which cannot be closely pursued without a modification to an extent of some of our rapid Yankee characteristics. There is no doubt that the imperceptible mingling of the two nationalities now going on is effecting a favorable result upon both, and nothing will tend to increase the ameliorating process like a free interchange of sentiment through the current literature of Great Britain and the United States. The republication and extensive circulation of the British Reviews in this country has to a great extent effected this object, and through their columns a mutual interest in the affairs of both countries has sprung up and ripened into important and healthy results."

In British America how desirable it is that these recognized standards of British Literature, Science and Politics should be extensively known; and we are therefore glad to learn that their circulation of late has been much increased both in Canada and the other Provinces. The views entertained by British writers on the civil war that is now unhappily afflicting the great neighboring Republic, may be readily learnt from these periodicals, which correctly represent the opinions of the various leading parties of the empire. It should be borne in mind that these are not pirated editions; Messrs. Scott & Co., have arrangements with the British publishers for advanced sheets, which enable them to reproduce these invaluable periodicals and place them in the hands of their numerous subscribers throughout this vast continent within two or three weeks after their publication in Britain, and that too, for one third of the original price!

The present is a favourable time to commence subscribing, as the new volumes for 1862 began with the January numbers. The terms per annum for any one of the four Reviews, or Blackwood, are $3. For any two, $5; and for the whole only $10; thus placing the recognised exponents of British learning and statesmanship within the reach of individuals interested in such matters either singly or by clubbing.
