

way up, and were curing the fever so quickly that no more than one or two days were lost after the operation of our remedy. Severe attacks in Linyanti were cured generally without loss of strength. The remedy was first tried on my own children and a party of the English at the Lake Ngami in 1850, and I have never failed in a single case since. I have said little about it as it would appear quackish, which you know, we doctors have a mortal aversion to; but the loss at Linyanti makes me anxious to let it be known. When I went over to Linyanti to search for medicine for the disease of Sekeletu, the chief of the Makololos, I found the material for the composition of the fever powder in my waggon, which has been guarded to me during the last seven years and that within a few hundred yards of the missionaries graves. It is mentioned near the end of 'the Missionary Travels'—(Dr. Livingstone's book). I now mention it to every one likely to try it, and though you may never need it, possibly at some future time your friends may."

SALVATION FOR YOUR SOULS IS NEAR.

How strange? how doubly sad it is to reflect that a cure was so near at hand, and yet to perish? Yes! the hitherto unfailling medicine was within an easy distance of the heroic missionaries—Mr. and Mrs. Helmore, Mrs. Price and three of her children, and their native guides—and still they died of the malady. And why? but because they did not know of the medicine being there; and although they had been aware of its nearness to them they were altogether ignorant of its power to cure;—just as Hagar and her son Ishmael in the wilderness, would have perished of thirst, though a well was close by, had not the angel of God appeared. This was none other than the Lord Jesus Christ himself. He opened the anxious mother's eyes to behold yonder green spot, and there she finds water in abundance. (Please to read Gen. xxi. 15-19) And so, dear young friends, you have the word of God within your reach, nay, in your very hands, telling you of the medicine—'the precious blood of Christ'—which cannot fail to cure the most desperately diseased souls! But your eyes of faith must be opened to see, and your hearts to understand its efficacy, if it would be of use to you. Plead with Jesus to send you His Holy Spirit, to give you sight, so that you may be able to see the 'well of salvation,' the 'fountain of living water.' Then up, drink, and apply, and your soul will be refreshed and strenghten-
